Many more deaths and prostrations were added to-day to the total of the frightful toll of what probably will go down into history as the Week of the Big Heat.

Forenoon temperatures showed that to-day was several degrees hotter than yesterday, and the indications early were that the mercury would reach the 100 mark by the middle of the afternoon, unless relief came suddenly.

Forecaster Smith went on record again to-day as predicting rain to-night in Boston. He also predicted it for to-morrow night.

The temperature at 10 o'clock to-day was 98, against 92 at that hour yesterday, and at 11 o'clock it was 95, a degree warmer than yesterday at that hour.

The suffering in Boston was probably more intense to-day than on any other day since the heat wave struck the city last Sunday. Men, women and children were so weakened by the stress of the long scourge that they were in no condition to resist the pitiless sun.

The famous east wind, that occasionally brought a cooling touch to the heated brow, it has been found, is very capricious. What Boston is praying for is a good, heavy, soaking rain.

Breeze Aids But Little.

In spite of the breeze that came in from the east during the early morning hours and kept blowing occasional cool whiffs, later the indications were that this would be a hotter day than yesterday, when the death toll and number of prostrations were appalling.

On the trains and ferry boats the throng on its way to work showed plainly the strain of the past four days of the unprecedented inferno.

Girls who work in store and factory were pale and hollow-eyed as though their night's rest had done them little good. They almost staggered as they struck the city pavements. In most of the places of employment it was so hot that it was arranged that the girls should work part time and then they were allowed to go home.

The men and boys were in no better

FAMINE IN ICE HITS BOSTON

Boston to-day experienced the terrors of an ice famine. The poor were the first to suffer.

Ice carts drove about in the crowded and sweltering North, West and South Ends of the city, but poor people could buy no ice from these wagons. Ice was supplied to saloons and hotels and restaurants. A poor woman or a child with five or ten cents could not go to or from these wagons.

President F. J. Barrett of the Boston Ice Company, which is the Ice Trust of Boston, admitted the truth of this condition.

"We simply have not ice enough for our customers. We cannot supply the peddlers who sell in five and ten-cent pieces. We are sorry, but we cannot help it. The railroads cannot bring our ice into Boston fast enough to meet conditions."

No Ice for the Poor.

The effects of the shortage of ice can only be described as terrible. Peddlers went about among their old customers in the poorer tenement districts and could only shake their heads when mothers carried babies and sick children hanging to the dresses asked for ice.

"We have none," would be the peddlers' reply. "The ice company will sell us none."

At this very moment a big ice wagon might be in full sight dumping great blocks of ice into barrooms and restaurants in the same block. But there was no ice for poor mothers and for poor children, except such scraps as could be picked up from the street where the teamsters had used their picks on the big blocks.

In the more prosperous suburbs of Boston conditions as a result of the ice shortage were felt to-day. Milk, butter and other perishables in icechests began to spoil because the ice men could not supply their customers fast enough. Their answer was that the big companies—the Boston Ice Company and the Independent Ice Company of Cambridge—did not have ice enough for the demand.

In many districts peculiar conditions added to the shortage supply. In thousands of homes natural mills was believed. The milk dealers declared that the milk had come into Boston imperfectly iced.

Stricken at Ice Plant.

In Winthrop, most of the people are served by the Winthrop Co-operative Ice Company, which is owned by prominent citizens of the town. Ice is manufactured at Winthrop Highlands. A strike of the men took place there yesterday afternoon, officials said, and the plant soon used up its stored supply. There were no deliveries to-day and last night. The Independent Ice Company of Coolidge offered to supply as many people in the town as it could until the plant is re-opened. The strike could not have come at a time to make its effect more disastrous.

President F. J. Barrett of the Boston Ice Company said:

"It may be true that thousands of poor people are suffering for lack of ice, but we are doing the best we can. We are attending to our regular customers first. The railroads are treating us shamefully, and we cannot get ice from the city half fast enough. We have plenty of ice, but we cannot get it into the city.

"It is true that we shut down on the small ice for peddlers and people who are not regular customers. We cannot supply ice to others or retail it at profit when we cannot supply our own demand. Seven to fifteenfeet of snow have covered the ice in Hingham and the ice froze to 18 inches. We are failing it for high prices."

SHIP FIREMEN ARE TO STRIKE

A big marine firemen's strike that may tie up the Metropolitan Line, the Eastern Line, the United Fruit Company and all coal boats running out of this port is threatened to-day by the Marine Firemen's Union of Boston.

Twelve men were called off the San Jose, owned by the United Fruit Company, to-day, and the officers of the men's union say that they are merely holding the general strike order in abeyance until it is sanctioned by the New York officials.

The main grievance complained of by the union is the so-called "boarding-house master-evil," by which it is alleged that the marine firemen are systematically robbed of their earnings through illegal bonuses paid for desirable berths. They demand that this be done away with by ensuring recognition to their union and shipping the men from the union's Commercial street office.

A uniform wage scale, giving the men an increase of $5 a month, originally was incorporated as part of the union's demands, but in a number of instances the lines affected have announced they intend to pay the higher wage scale. This now makes the "boarding-house-master-evil" the principal bone of contention as the matter stands.

MR. TAFT'S THIN BROTHER MOVED TO CONSOLATION

CINCINNATI, O., July 6.—Horace Taft, brother of the President, says he doesn't understand how the White House occupant can get along in such hot weather as the present. "Why, do you know, he spoils more clothing during such hot weather as this than I buy in three years," said brother Horace to-day. "He stood it splendidly when he was in the Philippines, but the hot weather in this country just tuckers him out. I'd a whole lot rather be slender, like I am, than fat like him. And perspire—whew, but he does. I guess he didn't relish his trip to Indiana this week because of the heat."

BOY KILLED BY A MILK WAGON

Edward Gordon, the fifteen months old son of Lieutenant Herbert Gordon of the Cambridge police, was run over by a milk wagon and instantly killed at Short Beach, Winthrop, to-day. The wagon is owned by the C. E. Hood Milk Company, and was in charge of a driver named E. W. Sanford. He was immediately placed under arrest on a charge of manslaughter. He will be arraigned in the East Boston Police Court later.

MISS EDITH DEACON SAILS FOR EUROPE

NEW YORK, July 6.—Among the passengers on the steamship Pouraine of the French line, which sailed to-day, was Miss Edith Deacon of Boston. She would state nothing as to her plans abroad, merely say ing that she was going to visit relatives. She was dressed in mourning, and wore a widow's veil for George L. Peabody of Boston, her fiance, who recently died in a Baltimore hospital.

FOUR HURT AS AUTO HIT TRAIN

Four Beverly men were badly shaken up and had a narrow escape from death early to-day when the touring car in which they were joy riding crashed into a train of ice cars at the Ice House crossing in North Beverly.

The auto was running at a high rate of speed and the train approached without warning. The front wheels of the machine were jammed under the wheels of one of the ice cars and only the fact that the force of the collision threw the machine into the roadway prevented their being killed outright. The auto was battered into a tangled mass.

Thomas F. Bowers, a chauffeur, was driving the car owned by his employer, George L. Mandell of Boston and the North Shore, when he met three friends, whom he asked to take a ride. They were William A. Crouse, Dana of Walsh and Everett A. Trask, all of Beverly. They are all at the Beverly Hospital with cuts and bruises. Crouse and Trask are on the dangerous list.

TURKEY PLANS FOR BALKAN WAR

CONSTANTINOPLE, Turkey, July 6.—Preparations have been advanced for the general mobilization of Turkish troops in view of the continued refusal of rebellious Albanians to surrender and to the activity of the Montenegrin forces along the frontier.

The government officials at the same time continue to express hope of an ultimate peaceful outcome. They assert that the Montenegrin government is bluffing. The recall of the Turkish minister at Cettinje is considered no improbable.

TO-DAY'S CABLE NEWS

Up to Midnight London Time

Troops Called Out in Big Marine Strike.

AMSTERDAM—Troops were called out here today to quell the most serious violence that has yet marked the marine strike. This city passed a night of wild terror, with strikers raging through the streets destroying property and defying the police. Eight persons were wounded in clashes with the police and soldiers, some of them probably fatally. Three arrests were made. The fighting occurred on the harbor front, but the rioting gradually spread until it extended over a large section of the city.

Nobel Children Burned.

VIBORG, Finland—The house of Ludwig Nobel, the oil millionaire, has been destroyed by fire and two of his children have been burned to death. The children were a son and a daughter, seven and five years old respectively. Their governess made desperate efforts to save them and tried to kill herself when she failed. Nobel and his wife were in St. Petersburg.

$27,000 for Huth Woodcuts.

LONDON—At the sale of the Huth collection of engravings at Sotheby's, the magnificent collection of woodcuts from the designs of Albrecht Durer, originally formed by Abraham Ortelius, the geographer, and sold at his death in 1598, fetched $27,000.

$100,000 to Aid Albanians.

VIENNA—Charles R. Crane of Chicago has given $100,000 toward relieving misery among the Albanians. The money will be distributed in cash or necessaries under the direction of Miss Edith Durham, superintendent of the Podgoritza Hospital.

KIEL—The Kaiser has sailed on the imperial yacht Hohenzollern for a trip to Norway.

NEW MACHINE WILL WASH YOUR MONEY

WASHINGTON, July 6.—Secretary of the Treasury MacVeagh has gone into the laundry business. In two months the laundry will be in full blast. The huge washing machine arrived to-day and mechanics are getting it up in the Bureau of Engraving and Printing. The article is to be laundered, will be paper money. By this device the government hopes to save the handling of thousand dollars. Dirty bills, instead of being destroyed, will be returned to the banks as clean as new.

BOSTON CHEMIST IS DEAD AT ANDOVER

ANDOVER, N. H., July 6.—Harry E. Sawyer, a chemist connetal wth the United States Department of Agriculture, is dead at East Andover, after an illness of more than a year. He was born in Portland, Me., forty-three years ago, and is survived by a widow and one daughter. Sawyer was a consulting chemist connected with a Boston concern for many years.

BOSTON NAVY YARD IS TO BE KEPT UP

WASHINGTON, July 6.—There is no longer the remotest likelihood that the Navy Department will recommend the abandonment of the Charlestown Navy Yard. This was made clear to-day when acting Secretary Beekman Winthrop discussed the reports he had received from the various yards as to the actual amount of work they are doing and the cost in maintenance of each.

POLICE GUARD AT L STREET

The L Street Bath opened at 8:30 a. m. to-day with a detail of policemen on hand from station 32 to preserve order.

The riots among the bathers which have gone on for the past two days will be quelled if a permanent detail of police is necessary to maintain discipline. Such is the determination of the bath trustees and the police.

When the bath was thrown open to the public early to-day there were at least 200 waiting to take a dip in the briny. The early morning crowd was orderly and Superintendent Kelley and his assistants all state the trouble of the past few days has been due to a gang of bathers who frequent the bath and annoy foreigners who are peaceful and avoid trouble.

The same results, it is said, are caused by many of the regular patrons of the bath, are the ones who get a key and a closet early in the morning and remain there all day, thus denying others the privilege of a swim and forcing them to wait for hours in the hot sun.

New Rule in Effect.

A new rule has been put into effect at the bath which is expected to operate toward relieving the overcrowded conditions. Persons who visit the bath with their own trunks may walk right out, address on the bench and leave their clothes there provided they are properly safeguarded. Valuables will be checked at the office. This rule has already relieved many of the inconvenience and discomfort of waiting in the long line.

All of the regular patrons of the bath united in complimenting Superintendent Kelley, Instructor Goode and the other employes of the bath for the patience displayed in caring for the wants of the thousands who have visited the baths in the past few days.

"The trouble at the bath is not with the employes or the system," said Councilor Jeremiah J. McNamara, speaking for the "Brownies" to-day.

"Two and three times the number of people that can be accommodated with convenience and comfort have visited the bath house during this hot spell. It would be hard to have everybody behave themselves. There are a few get in who deliberately spoil the fun of hundreds of others. They pick out the foreigners, unused and tease them into a frenzy and then when they resent it start and abuse them. But they are only the few. The great majority are orderly and it will be a satisfaction if the police take a few of these fresh ones and make examples of them."

Plain Clothes Men Sent.

Superintendent Kelley said that the trouble at the bath had been somewhat exaggerated. "Our main difficulty has been to stop this practice of those who secure keys and sell them for twenty-five cents or more. They are the ones who are causing this trouble. We have tried to take care of the abnormal crowds to the best of our ability, and, while there has been some inconvenience caused to many by the long waits in the hot sun, yet it could not be avoided under any system, since the capacity of the bath is overtaxed. We are doing our best to find some remedy for the unfair practice of holding keys and trying to sell them, but it is no easy matter."

At Police Headquarters, it was learned today that two plain clothes men had been delegated to the beach. They will don bathing suits and mix in with the regular bathers, and it will be their purpose to detect pickpockets and quell any trouble arises.

"No system that could be devised could take care of the immense crowds that came to the L street bath for relief from the hot weather, without causing some inconvenience," said Richard M. Walsh, chairman of the municipal bath trustees.

"The number of people who patronized the bath was many times the number that could properly be accommodated and the fact that many had to stand in line in the hot sun for a considerable period, necessarily caused grumbling. The employes worked to the limit.

"As to the trouble on the beach it is unfortunate that in caring for the wants of many thousands a few will always be found who have little or no regard for the feelings of others, who unnecessarily clutter the beach, and who, no matter what the conditions, are bound to cause trouble.

More Attendants Hired.

"The great majority of the people that patronize the bath are law abiding and respectable and resort to it primarily for the purpose of finding needed relief from the torrid temperature. It is regretable that a small element of a troublesome nature also patronizes the bath and has managed to destroy the comfort of many. Nevertheless we will endeavor to see that the rules are strictly lived up to. We have put on additional men to handle this extra hot weather period. It is our purpose to see that the greatest number of citizens enjoy a dip in the water during the hours that the bath is open.

"It was a case of trying to crowd two human beings into the space that was intended for one," said Bath Trustee Francis M. Carroll.

"Necessarily some people were inconvenienced. We regret it, but under the circumstances it was impossible to avoid. Nobody who saw the tremendous rush of the past few days can appreciate what the task is of caring for such a multitude without some inconvenience.

"We have put on extra men and it is our purpose to try and remedy the conditions about which there has been complaint."

RIVAL SCORES ON MISS SEARS

It's up to Miss Eleonora Sears to act as fireman—or firewoman.

Her athletic rival, the "Connie" Warren of New York and Newport, and well known in Boston, is the heroine of New York today for her new role in wielding a fireman's axe and playing a chemical stream upon a fire in the laundry of a Newport villa.

"Connie" Warren and Elee Sears have long been rivals in athletic stunts. Both are hard riders, indefatigable walkers, long-distance swimmers, fast tennis players, clever with the billiard cue and Dianas-in-general to the society set.

Whatever one does, the other emulates. Miss Sears has been up to a firing machine. So has Miss Warren. Miss Sears gained fame by her horse long-distance walk in California. Miss Warren swam 20 miles from Butler's Beach to Easton Beach, at Newport. Both ride astride in during fashion. Each is a thorough judge of horseflesh. Each is the despair of student wooers. Athletic and social honors read evenly between them.

Miss Sears Scored Upon.

Now Miss Warren has put one over on Miss Sears, as their intimate friends might say in the terse slang which is affected in the smart set. She has played fireman. At 5:30 to the afternoon, when most of Newport was gasping for breath, Miss Warren came driving down Bellevue avenue, accompanied by her groom. Miss Warren was gowned in snowy white. A fire alarm sounded. Miss Warren checked off the count.

"Five seconds over, John," she said to the groom, "guess we'd better fly to the fire."

They flew. That is, Miss Warren sped her horse along at a fast clip to the Breen villa, property of the late Mrs. Charles C. Perkins of Boston, but now unoccupied, when smoke and flames were issuing from the laundry.

Flowers arrived and put several streams on the blaze. Miss Warren eased impatiently. Then she stripped off her driving gloves, rushed up to a husky, helmeted fireman and said:

"Can't I help?"

Most of the firemen know Miss Warren by sight. They admire her vastly, especially the firegrs, who recognize her prowess as a whip.

Miss Warren Swings Axe.

Why—yes!" stammered the fireman, handing her an axe. Miss Warren swung the axe vigorously against a stretch of plastering on the side of the laundry, opening up a big seam through which smoke and darting flames could be seen.

Another fireman came along with a chemical hose.

"Lemme have that hose," said Miss Warren. Before the firemen could say whether or no, the girl-wife-and-golfer grasped the nozzle and was playing the chemical stream on the flames.

Smoke poured forth, making the girl cough and gasp a bit. Tears came to her eyes. But she stuck to her post gamely.

Miss Warren smiled through the smudge of smoke as the crowd cheered. Her white dress was a sad sight. Her hands were blackened. Perspiration streaked her face, plowing little channels through the dirt which clung to her features.

When the fire was under control and the real excitement was over, "Connie" Warren strode away, jumped to her driving seat and started home for a much needed bath and change of attire.

The firemen are wondering what Chief Kirwin thinks of the performance. The Chief resents interference with his heroic department. At a fire near the waterfront the Chief declined aid proffered by the naval lieutenant. But people surmise that Chief Kirwin will not say anything unpleasant to "Connie" Warren.

GREAT FIGHTING FLEET GATHERS

PROVINCETOWN, July 6.—The van guard of what is to be the biggest United States naval fleet ever assembled in any port, has arrived here. Twenty-five battleship ships and auxiliaries have dropped mud hooks inside the harbor, preparatory to engaging in rigorous tests at war games in Cape Cod Bay.

Twenty-one big battleships will be of the assembling force, which will number probably sixty or seventy naval vessels, for practically all heavily armed crafts. For ten days at least it is expected this big force will make rendezvous here.

Then certain battleships are to proceed to points along shore to take on naval reserves of several States for brief periods of sea duty, returning to Provincetown to take part in Cape Cod Bay manoeuvres of divers sorts. A large number of officers' wives, mothers and sisters are here, many at hotels, others occupying cottages, to remain in many cases until late in the Summer.

That some measure of play is to mingle with the great mass of work scheduled for performance by the fleet's men, is indicated by certain movements on the part of parties that were landed from battleships Georgia, Nebraska and Virginia during their all June stay in port. These working parties were kept busily engaged in fixing the grounds at Evans Field Park, owned by the men of the Atlantic squadron, in anticipation of games to be played during July and a part of August.

Provincetown people are disposed to give the men of the fleet a good time. A reading room has been opened for the bluejackets in Town Hall, and has been well patronized from the start. Current periodicals, newspapers, stationery and games of various sorts are there provided, and further lounging and smoking room is found in the basement.

COREY'S SON TAKES A BRIDE

DETROIT, July 6.—Miss Marguerite Hendrickson, famed in the wake of Alan Lyle Corey of New York city, son of W. E. Corey, the steel magnate. The wedding was performed at the home of the bride's parents, Mr. and Mrs. George Johnson, No. 468 Woodward avenue, by Rev. A. W. Stalker.

Mr. Corey was attended by a classmate at Yale, Edward Coy of New Haven.

Mr. Corey, who has just been graduated from Yale, won special honors in college athletics not only during the past year, when he was captain of the baseball team, but also during 1909, when he was captain of the Yale football team.

Mr. Corey and his bride left for the Pacific coast on a honeymoon cruise and sail for a trip around the world.

Nearly everybody in Boston reads the AMERICAN.

MORGAN JOINS KAISER'S CLUB

BERLIN, July 6.—The election of J. Pierpont Morgan as a member of the Imperial Yacht Club at Kiel last week, by the Kaiser's command, is described thus by a local society paper:

"Ordinary mortals desiring the most exclusive club must first have backers. Their names are displayed for several weeks at three different places—firstly the Ministry of Marine in Berlin; secondly, the clubhouse at Kiel, and thirdly, the Casino of the First Regiment of Foot Guards at Potsdam. One vote suffices to defeat a candidate from election. Moreover, the club statutes contain a provision that no foreigner shall be admitted to membership, by which it was probably intended to close all doors to the ambitions of American financial magnates. In Mr. Morgan's case the Emperor has swept away all these obstacles, for the Kaiser simply appointed him a member of the club and said: 'We have a new member, Mr. Pierpont Morgan, of New York.'"

At the banquet last week Mr. Morgan sat next to the Emperor.

"YET IT MIGHT HAVE BEEN WORSE," SAID THERMOMETER MAN

One of the most unique and at the same time one of the most pathetic incidents of the week's torrid period is the spectacle of an old man selling thermometers in Summer and Bedford streets.

Standing or walking, under the fierce rays of the sun, this aged man of over seventy Summers, bent and crippled, with a long white beard which would shame Father Time himself, has been seen daily this week offering to the passers by the little glass thermometers which tell in plain figures of the terrific heat, which is only too evident to prospective customers.

The old gentleman, however, seems to stand it better than many younger ones. Occasionally, though, the street vendor is obliged to seat himself for shelter in some friendly, shaded doorway and rest before he continues his march for a living.

His odd occupation has attracted the attention of hundreds.

'L' WANTS DELAY ON LEASE BILLS

A new danger to-day faced the Elevated-West End lease bills, with their provisions for new tunnels and subways in Boston. Lobbyists for the Boston Elevated and for the West End were to-day trying to lead the bills into a grave marked "Next General Court."

It became apparent to-day that heroic methods are needed to save this important transportation problem from being sidetracked for this year. The Elevated and the West End are working quietly but persistently to have the bills killed with a "Next General Court" reference, and it was apparent that some members of the Senate and House are willing, under certain conditions, to help the corporations kick the measure into the early part of January.

No Further Postponement.

The bills have gone over for action until next Monday, on motion of Senator Tinkham. The postponement was arranged in the hope that those West End stockholders who are holding out for a dividend of more than 7 per cent might be induced to come into line.

Senator Tinkham says that the postponement now granted will be the last. If the West End people have not agreed on what is considered to be a just settlement of differences by next Monday, he says, the two bills will be started on the road to the governor's office.

The AMERICAN is to-day able to state exactly the position of each of the parties identified with the endeavor to straighten out the problem.

Governor Foss's position and the position of Louis D. Brandeis, the Public Franchise League and other organizations is this:

The Park street to South Station subway, the Dorchester tunnel, the Boylston street subway and the East Boston tunnel extension must be provided for this year. The West End people have not agreed to what is considered to be a just settlement of differences by next Monday, he says, the two bills will be started on the road to the governor's office.

The AMERICAN is to-day able to state exactly the position of each of the parties identified with the endeavor to straighten out the problem.

Governor Foss's position and the position of Louis D. Brandeis, the Public Franchise League and other organizations is this:

The Park street to South Station subway, the Dorchester tunnel, the Boylston street subway and the East Boston tunnel extension must be provided for this year. The West End people have not agreed to what is considered to be a just settlement of differences by next Monday, he says, the two bills will be started on the road to the governor's office.

The L's Attitude.

The Elevated's attitude is this:

"We have agreed to a twenty-five-year lease rather than a fifty-year lease of the proposed new tunnels and subways. But the West End owns the approaches to these tunnels and subways. Our lease of the West End property expires in 1922. If we take on a twenty-five-year lease of these tunnels and subways, where will we be at the expiration of the West End lease? The West End people will jump us completely at their mercy. We cannot agree to rent the proposed new tunnels and subways unless we know how we may run our cars into them between the time our lease of the West End expires and the time the tunnel and subway leases expire."

The West End's attitude is this:

"We will agree either to a consolidation with the 'L' or to a lease to the 'L' long enough after 1922 to safeguard the 'L' in its leases of the proposed new tunnels and subways. But we will not stand for a dividend of only 7 per cent."

Confiscate West End?

To those who have watched the fight on the lease bills, it seemed to-day that the whole problem would be settled at once if the West End will agree to a 7 per cent. dividend. If the West End refuses to stand for this, it seemed that the following must happen:

The West End will vote not to consolidate with the 'L.'

The 'L' will refuse to lease the proposed new tunnels and subways.

The tunnels and subways, if they are built, will be idle.

OR

As Governor Foss has pointed out, the State may employ the confiscatory power, which is how corporations obtain the West End, seize the West End properties, and then lease them to another street railway.

Information has been carried to Governor Foss that the West End folks think he is "bluffing" on this last proposition. The Governor's answer can be expressed in four words:

"Just wait and see."

Governor Foss declares that the Legislature should not adjourn without having at least settled the question as to whether the new subways shall be built.

The West End stockholders are receiving letters from Charles Tyler of the progressive association, inviting them to communicate with the Governor upon the rate of interest.

NINE AVIATORS CROSS CHANNEL

CALAIS, France, July 6.—The great circuit of Europe air race for $94,000 in prizes shifted back to France to-day when nine aviators winged their way in their second flight across the English Channel. Pierre Vedrine, who has been leading at all stages of the contest, was the first to leave Dover and the first to arrive here. He negotiated the trans-channel course in thirty minutes and fourteen seconds.

The other contestants arrived in this order: Beaumont, Vidart, Gibert, Garros, Kimmerling, Taluzeau, Beaugny, carrying a passenger with him, and Barra.

The air men got an early start, Vedrine arriving here at 5:03. A great crowd gathered to watch the approach of the birdmen and ringing cheers greeted the contestants as they winged their way homeward. Some of them circled about in the air before landing.

RECORD BROKEN FOR JUNE BRIDES IN NEW YORK CITY

NEW YORK, July 6.—All previous records for weddings in New York city, during a single month, were broken in June. The marriage licenses issued by the city clerk numbered 6,040, against 5,728 issued in June last year, the record month since the establishment of the office.

FIGHT FIRE TO SAVE COTTAGES

MEREDITH, N. H., July 6.—A 5-acre forest fire that is supposed to have been started by lightning last evening is still burning today in the vicinity of Meredith Neck on the shore of Lake Winnepesaukee, and aid from outside has been asked. The fire raged all night, despite the efforts of over two hundred men, and destroyed a large amount of timber on the estates of Joseph Breck of Boston and of Penn Tolcott.

The fire is now threatening the house of Mrs. John Downes of Hingham and the cottages of other Summer residents.

John Batchelor was one of the first to telephone to Meredith, and to the neighboring town of Centre Harbor for help. All the automobiles in the two places were impressed to carry men to the fire, and a large number went from Centre Harbor.

CHICKENS HATCHED BY HEAT OF SUN IN CHELMSFORD

LOWELL, July 6.—Gilbert Wright of Chelmsford, a suburb of Lowell, reports that a setting of eggs which the hen had abandoned when almost ready to hatch, hatched out without the hen's assistance at the nest.

The heat had been so intense that it drove the hen off the nest, but it was warm enough for the atmosphere to take the place of the hen. Ten eggs have released chickens and others are expected.

The circulation of the AMERICAN is 300,000 more than its next highest competitor and 100,000 more than all the other evening papers of Boston combined.

PATROLMAN IS HURT BY HORSE

Patrolman Thomas Trainor of the court square police station was badly injured early today during a runaway. Trainor was on a milk wagon owned by J. W. Davis. The horse started in Pemberton Square down hill into Scollay square. Trainor and Patrolman Barthel were standing there when the animal ran by and attempted to grab the bridle.

He was dragged down viaduct and in front of No. 50 the wagon collided with a dray, owned by Knight & Son, and Trainor was jammed between the vehicles. The horse broke away from the shafts and was caught a few feet away by a citizen. Trainor was taken to Relief Hospital and is in a precarious condition. The police have not found the driver of the wagon.

MANY FALL IN STRIKE BATTLE

MANCHESTER, England, July 6.—The city was an armed camp today, with hundreds of soldiers on duty to suppress the strike violence. Rioting throughout the night resulted in troops being called and a special detail of 500 police was raised from London. A squadron of cavalry and 600 infantry were on the scene. The local police were unable to put down the disorder. In clashes with the mobs a number were injured and a great amount of property was damaged. The ringleaders of the men assembled a threatening attitude, but the presence of the armed troops had a quieting effect.

The authorities failed to keep the strikers in hand. Strikers gathered into a mob and were parading through the streets when a detachment of police attempted to disperse them.

Friday Is Hundred Bargain Day

STORE CLOSES: Daily at 5 P. M. Saturday, 1 P. M.

And Here's the Strongest List of FRIDAY BARGAINS Ever Published in July

The greatest bargains in Boston to-morrow will be found here, but aside from the many sensational cut prices on high-grade Summer merchandise, there are many other reasons why you should do your shopping at Siegel's during the warm weather. Our Soda Fountain is the coolest and most delightful rendezvous on a hot day in Boston. Our Restaurant is the favorite place of thousands for a good hot or cold lunch or a dainty afternoon tea, being high above the noise and dust of the streets, up where you get a cool, refreshing breeze. Our rest room needs no introduction, as nearly every shopper in Boston has at one time or another taken refuge within its quiet confines. Last and most important of all, the store itself is big and roomy, with windows on four sides, and, furthermore, it is all under one roof—you do not have to walk from one building to another. This is why you get so much more than your money's worth when you shop at Siegel's.

CHAMP CLARK WILL VISIT BOSTON SOON

WASHINGTON, N. J., July 6.—Representative Murray of Boston has secured a promise from Speaker Champ Clark to visit there late in August. He asked the speaker to go to Boston and address a large gathering of Massachusetts Democrats on an occasion now being organized by Joseph Maynard and the city committee. The speaker said he would probably be able to come.

DEATH DEALING HEAT WAVE ATTACKS BOSTON FIFTH STRAIGHT DAY

physical condition than the girls. They presented an exhausted appearance. Through the hot streets they walked with languid steps. Few employers were there who expected much energy from their help to-day or who, expecting it, got it.

The firemen of the city did splendid work to-day in helping to cope with the acute situation. Thousands of children, who go barefooted during the Summer months, found that the pavements blistered their feet when they ventured from their homes.

Firemen Sprinkle Streets.

In many of the sizzling streets the firemen played the hose on the pavements until they were cooled, to the great delight and relief of the little folk. Girls and boys paddled in the water that ran several inches deep in many places.

This water cooled the air in the hot streets and when it was blown through open windows it brought a little relief to those who have been suffering in a death-like furnace since the blistering heat wave struck Boston.

Fumish animals felt the heat, and many of them were almost driven mad by their suffering. Horses, dogs and cats were also as much victims of the hot weather as their owners.

In Boston the kindness with which drivers treat their horses is noticeable. Many men are more careful of the horses they drive than they are of themselves. Early to-day a fine big team of horses were stopped at a fountain and allowed to drink their fill. The man had been driving slowly and had taken every precaution that his team should be kept as cool as possible. He got a good deal out of the horses with great care and their proceeded leisurely on his way.

At the offices of the Society for the Prevention of Cruelty to Animals, No. 45 Milk street, the officials said that during the hot spell they have treated only on an average of two or three horses daily, and that the owners and drivers of horses in Boston were showing the greatest care and precaution in the use of their animals.

Huntington Smith, managing director of the Animal Rescue League, which has its quarters at No. 51 Carver street and cares for dogs and cats, said:

"The league has been treating on an average of twelve cats and dogs a day during the warm weather. It was necessary Sunday to chloroform four dogs, and even do the crazed dogs rarely attack persons unless tormented by them, and when placed in our cool cellars they soon become pacified."

A large portion of Greater Boston has been driven to the open for sleep. In nearly every home—even in the humblest—the well-to-do—mattresses have been spread on lawns and in yards for sleeping purposes at night.

Hundreds Sleep on Common.

Hundreds slept in Boston Common last night, and the crowds and benches were crowded to-day. Franklin Park through which there is generally a good breeze and in which they are more apt to shield one from the direct rays of the sun, was a Mecca for thousands. The street cars running toward the shore resorts and toward the parks were crowded to-day.

It was the little helpless children that called forth the greatest pity—babies too little to help themselves and to many cases in the hands of those who are almost powerless to help them.

In many homes in Boston the fight to save the babies has been an incessant one from the start of the hot spell. Death has claimed an alarming number. Unless relief in the way of cooler weather comes more little ones will fall victims in this great tragedy of nature.

In many of the suburban towns the heat has even been more intense than in Boston. In the Newtons and Wellesleys—a section that has plenty of shade, spacious grounds and lots of pure air—it was said to-day that the suffering among rich and poor alike had been frightful.

Sections of towns where the foreign element predominates were almost depopulated to-night, whole families going to the open fields to sleep. In the wooded sections the heat was more severe than in the open, it was found.

Getting to Be Monotonous.

The Weather Bureau in Washington and Boston have developed a remarkable case of the Mexican manana (to-morrow). The forecasters have been promising "rain—to-morrow" since Monday, and they did it again.

This dispatch comes from Washington: "Relief from the hot wave was promised to-day by the Weather Bureau, but not until to-morrow, when the cold wave from the Western States across the Mississippi River is expected to sweep down the Atlantic coast, bringing a drop of many degrees. Temperatures as low as 54 degrees are recorded in the 'high' area."

An elderly woman on Washington street, all but dropping from the heat, propped herself against one of the big windows and panted. She was entrance, but managed to remain standing until a good Samaritan assisted her to the corner drug store, where she was relieved with a cooling drink.

"I have lived in Boston for sixty-nine years," she said, "and this has never occurred to me before. I have seen some warm days, but nothing like this. I remember the winter of 1880 and 1881 (September of 1881), but I don't think they compare with this at all. Never since I have been in Boston have people suffered as they have these last two or three days."

Announcement was made that the Majestic Theatre had been closed until the matinee next Monday. "Zaza," which was scheduled by the Lindsay Morison Stock Company for all this week, will have the stage for the reopening. This is one of the few occasions when acting and actresses have suffered so much from the heat as to be unable to continue their productions.

Among the factories in Cambridge that were closed owing to the heat, were those of Ginn & Co., where 300 are employed, and the Revere Rubber Works, where there are about the same number of workers.

In Winchester and Stoneham street employees were sent home and factories were closed early.

Frequently men were overcome while unloading fish from the vessels in T wharf. Some dropped in their tracks and were carried away. Others were able to continue at work only by having a stream of water directed on them from a hose.

Hospital Forces Overtaxed.

Never before have the hospitals of this city been so taxed. During the past four days the ambulance service of the Boston hospitals has been putting forth herculean work. At times the demand exceeded the supply. Then it became necessary to call upon the Police Department, and patrol wagons were utilized in conveying the victims to the hospitals.

Frequently the horses attached to the various ambulances had to be attended to. A great was the burden upon their strength. At times the lives of their victims became so great that the overworked hospital attaches could not record names and other data.

So great was the demand for hot weather dishes, such as crackers and milk, that several of the down town restaurants ran short of milk. Efforts to obtain an emergency supply from neighbors was generally met with the statement that the "run" on milk had been general in its effects.

TWO DEAD FROM THE INTENSE HEAT IN WORCESTER

WORCESTER, July 6.—Hiram N. French, fifty-seven, superintendent of the money order division of the Worcester postoffice, who was found unconscious on the floor of the toilet room of the office, died in the City Hospital at 3:45 a. m. to-day from the effects of the heat and a cerebral hemorrhage.

John W. Doris, sixty-four, who kept a barber shop at No. 245 Main street, was found dead in one of the chairs at 7 o'clock. Policeman David J. Whelan talked with Doris at 5 a. m. in front of the shop. Doris had a reputation as a whistler, and is said to have performed for Queen Victoria at Buckingham Palace twenty years ago.

FAIL TO IDENTIFY MAN HEAT KILLED IN SOUTH BOSTON

Efforts are being made to identify the man Michael Maguire of No. 199 West Fourth street, South Boston, found lying on his doorsteps in semi-comatose condition. Maguire took the stranger indoors and seeing that he was overcome by the heat, summoned the police. Dr. H. J. Keenan was sent to the scene and found the man dead. He is thought heat prostration killed him.

Nothing is known of the man who he is. The body was taken to North Grove street morgue to await identification. The unknown was about fifty-five years old, five feet eight inches tall and weighed about 170 pounds. He had a sandy mustache and wore a gray coat and vest.

Washington Feels Better.

WASHINGTON, July 6.—The capital to-day experienced some relief from the hot wave. At 9:30 a. m. the temperature was only 88 degrees and a cool breeze added to the comparative comfort. No cases of heat prostration were reported to-day, though there were six last night. During the four days of the great heat wave there have been five deaths and 111 prostrations.

Syracuse Babies Dying.

SYRACUSE, N. Y., July 6.—Four days of torrid heat have resulted in a toll of nine dead and twenty-one prostrations. The heat has been the most intense in the history of the local weather bureau, with no promise of early relief. Babies are the principal sufferers.

Five Deaths in Buffalo.

BUFFALO, N. Y., July 6.—Five deaths up to 9 a. m. to-day was the toll taken by the record breaking heat wave for eighteen hours in Buffalo.

11 DRUGGISTS GET LICENSES

GLOUCESTER, July 6.—One of the most dramatic scenes in the history of aldermanic debates in this city occurred while the matter of granting druggists' licenses was under discussion. The Mayor announced that he should vote for one druggist license and no more, although he did not think he was legally bound to do that.

Then Alderman Merchant arose and asked why he should discriminate in favor of any one druggist. Continuing he said that a certain hotel proprietor came to him and told him that the city marshal said the Mayor intended to raid the hotels. Why should the Mayor notify them, he asked, and not notify the person whose place fitted up over night and been raided next day.

Mayor Patch said he had been visited by a hotel man in reference to the policy of the administration, and had notified the marshal to say that hotels as well as other places would be raided.

PICK NEW STATE AUDITOR TODAY

Both political parties in the Legislature are holding caucuses to-day to select candidates for State auditor to fill the vacancy caused by the death of Henry E. Turner of Malden.

Representative Charles A. Dean of Wakefield and John J. Conway of Boston are the leading candidates in the Democratic party, while Senator John E. White of the Cape, who has been making a quiet canvass for a long time, will be opposed by former Senator Elmer E. Perker of Worcester. Former Representative Herbert Durr of Boston will also be a candidate.

MA COUSIN CARUS' BITTEN BY A HORSE

NEW YORK, July 6.—Antonio Caruso, cousin of Enrico Caruso, the tenor, was driving to his home in Bronxville, a few miles from Bloomfield with his nephew, John Rizzo, when on the outskirts of Bloomfield the horse, affected by the heat, became balky. Wires Caruso attempted to lead the horse it bit him in the side and on the left hand.

BOSTON HIT BY SHIP STRIKE

Boston is feeling to-day the effects of the big seamen's strike in England, the sailing of the White Star liner Zeeland from Liverpool to this port having been cancelled altogether because she couldn't get a crew, while the Leyland liner Devonia cleared from Liverpool to Boston to-day after being held up almost a week by the strike. The Zeeland's freight is still at Liverpool, and the hundreds of passengers that were booked to come to this city on her have been transferred to the company's New York boats. The delay in the sailing of the Devonia, which has seventy-five first-class passengers and 3,000 tons of freight, also is said to operate strongly against Boston as a shipping centre, despite the fact that there was no strike called on the boat in this port.

You see the AMERICAN everywhere—in the homes, clubs, restaurants, hotels, cars and boats.

10 MORE DROWN IN NEW ENGLAND

Ten persons were added to the death toll from drowning in New England yesterday. The heat wave is said to have caused thousands of people who are not swimmers to tempt fate in dangerous waters. The record of drowning so far this year is the greatest in many years.

FIN. COM. GETS FIREWORKS CASE

With the general dissatisfaction that followed the meagre display of fireworks on the Charles River basin and the holding up of the bill by the City Hall officials comes the announcement that the United Fireworks Company, which supplied the display, is also charged with failure to live up to its contracts with the city of New York.

New York citizens are up in arms. They have demanded an investigation of the terms and the carrying out of the contracts by which New Yorkers were to be furnished amusement on the evening of the Fourth. The Board of Aldermen will begin an inquiry Tuesday. The Finance Commission will investigate the Boston contract.

The Boston contract called for a $1,000 display. The New York contracts were for $420 in each district, and Vice-President Best of the Board of Aldermen says that he has been offered bids to duplicate the display furnished for $97.25.

Swears Profit Was $320.

Michels Nanna of East Durham, N. J., in an affidavit, swears that he furnished the displays to the United Company and that President Love of the concern gave him $150 for each package. For these packages the city had bound itself to pay $420.

How the United Company happened to get the business of the city of Boston is somewhat of a mystery. Secretary Field of the Mayor's office says that the company came highly recommended as one that would furnish a first-class exhibition of fireworks on the water. As the city had trouble with the display last year it was decided to do business with the United Company, even though it is not a Boston concern. Unofficially it is understood that one of the Good Government members of the City Council vouched for the company.

The Boston display took less than a half hour to run off. The New York displays lasted less than that period and some of them were over in ten minutes. "Aerial batteries" were found in but six or seven roman candles bound together with one fuse. An unofficial statement describes New York's $420 displays as consisting of eighty-five nine-inch shells, 100 pound-bags of red fire and twenty-six batteries.

Fin. Com. to Seek Facts.

There is such general dissatisfaction with the Boston display that Acting Mayor Collins will ask the Finance Commission to investigate the contract. While the bill has been held up there is a belief that the contract should be thoroughly aired for the purpose of learning just where the company failed to live up to its contract and why the display was not what was ordered. Acting Mayor Collins held a conference with Chairman Sullivan of the Finance Commission yesterday and the fireworks display was one of the matters discussed. It is understood that the commission will take up the matter at once.

MAINE BLOWN UP FROM THE INSIDE

WASHINGTON, July 6.—The loss of the battleship Maine was caused by the explosion of her three magazines. No such effect as that produced upon the vessel could have been caused by an explosion from without.

Such is the opinion of General William H. Bixby, chief of engineers, U. S. A., who has returned from a personal inspection of the work of raising the Maine.

General Bixby said: "That a portion of the deck over the magazines was blown upward and laid backward, and that there were numerous conditions of the hulk as it lies in Havana Harbor which prove the explosion was an interior one. No explosion from the outside, said the General, could have caused the same result.

"What the primary cause of the explosion was," said General Bixby, "never will be learned."

Bodies Buried in Mud.

General Bixby does not believe that the bodies of those who lost their lives will be found on the Maine. He says they are probably buried 200 feet or more from the wreck in the mud.

When General Bixby examined the wreck 150 feet of the hull was above water. For ten days he carefully went over every part exposed to view and with long poles probed into the interior of it. He was able to determine the exact condition of the wreck and to observe the destruction had really been. His knowledge of explosives and their action renders his opinion virtually conclusive.

The wreck is in a much worse condition than was expected by army and navy officials. General Bixby declares:

"There is no doubt in my mind," said General Bixby to-day, "that the explosion was from the inside. I am sure destruction was caused by the explosion of the magazines. There are numerous conditions which prove this."

Ship's Sides Are Missing.

"A portion of the deck over the magazines was blown upward and laid backward," said General Bixby. "After poling with oars over the place where the sides of the battleship next to the magazines ought to be, I could find them. This means they were blown outward and are at the bottom of the harbor. No explosion from the outside could have caused the same result.

"The primary cause of the explosion will never be learned. It might have been spontaneous combustion, caused by the coal. If it was caused by a torpedo or mine from without, the fact will never be established.

"Discussions regarding the destruction of the battleship are absolutely useless. One fact looms large, and that is that the principal havoc was done by the interior explosion. There is no doubt that it was this explosion which hurled up the decks and with them the mass of the crew.

"The wreck is now turned outward, but whether it was first turned inward and then by a second explosion turned outward, cannot be determined."

General Bixby said it is probable that the rear portion of the wreck can be pumped out and floated. The great part, however, will have to be taken to pieces and hauled away.

How to Keep Baby Comfortable

Keep him out of the sun.

Bathe him regularly every morning and lightly sponge him once or twice a day. Scrupulous cleanliness is imperative.

Keep mosquitoes and flies away from him, his bottle and his food.

Modify the milk you give him with Ridge's Food. Food so prepared digests easily, nourishes and keeps the bowels regular.

Keep the milk and the food which has been prepared on ice. If the ice runs low, the milk can be kept sweet for many hours by standing the bottle of milk upside down in a pail of water.

If any sign of looseness appears, scald the milk. If the looseness is persistent, take away all milk for a few feedings and give him only Ridge's Food and water.

Do not overfeed.

You can get Ridge's Food, the Milk Modifier, from any druggist. Prices are 25c, 50c, $1.00 and $1.50.

LABOR MEN TO HONOR QUINCY HEAT VICTIM

Organized labor in Quincy to-day completed arrangements for the burial of Edwin B. Langley, financial secretary of the Quincy Electrical Workers' Union and a delegate to the Quincy Central Labor and Building Trades Department Council, who died of heat prostration yesterday. Mr. Langley was one of the most widely known young labor leaders in Quincy, and lived at No. 1,543 Hancock street. He was the son of George O. Langley, ex-chief of the Quincy police force, and leaves a wife and one child. Burial will be at Forest Hills on Saturday afternoon, after the body is cremated.

LOAN SHARK CURB BILL UP FOR FINAL ACTION IN THE HOUSE TO-DAY

The Tinkham-Cavanagh loan-shark bill comes before the House for its final reading before engrossment to-day. It was ordered to a third reading yesterday by the unanimous vote of the House, without so much as a single voice being raised against its enactment into law.

Headed by Representative Cavanagh, House chairman of the Committee on Banks and Banking that reported this remedial measure by unanimous votes, the loan-shark opponents are putting it through in record-breaking time. Senator Tinkham, also, is said to have arranged for its speedy passage through the upper house. That it will reach the Governor in less than ten days is now regarded as a foregone conclusion.

Following the startling expose of loan-shark oppression in the Sunday AMERICAN'S great exclusive, an expose that sent a thrill of horror throughout the entire State, one would have to rake the State House over with a very fine-toothed comb to find a man with sufficient hardihood to defend the leech-like small-loan brokers.

Taylor a Martyr.

The sad story of Mrs. Clara S. Taylor of South Boston, whose only son was hounded to a suicide's grave after he had paid back $45 on a paltry $5 loan and still found himself owing the loan sharks $7, is too fresh in the minds of the men on Beacon Hill to permit of delay in the enactment of drastic legislation to protect the needy poor.

Conservative estimates place the number of small-loan brokers doing business in Boston alone at 1,000. But, numerous as they are, should any of their personal friends attempt to obstruct the bill intended to protect the numerous wills shown to exist in the Sunday AMERICAN'S story, Representative Cavanagh and his friends are prepared for them.

In addition to the fearful array of undeniable facts contained in the Sunday AMERICAN'S expose, the Joint Committee on Banks and Banking has some startling evidence of its own, which can be used if the necessity arises.

School Teachers Victims.

The friends of the Tinkham-Cavanagh bill can show in detail how two Boston school teachers were lured into a loan shark's trap by a glittering card-advertisement received through the mails, and then compelled to pay $110 on a $100 loan on which the loan-shark declares there is $150 still due.

These young women had illness and trouble in their families. One of them was suffering from the after effects of a bad case of grip. Her lungs were so weak that a trip to the country was an absolute necessity during the vacation period, and her friend decided to go with her.

Cultured college women, but densely ignorant of the unscrupulous means resorted to by the tenacious loan-sharks of Boston to extort money out of those in need, they saw in the beautiful colored circular that reached them through the mail, a possible chance of obtaining the money needed for their vacations.

It was a very easy matter for them to obtain the loan, as the shrewd little money-lender learned that they were employed as teachers in the public schools of this city at salaries of $500 and $650, respectively. But before they could get the $100 they had to sign a note calling for the payment of $150 for which they were to pay $10 per month. Then the jaws of the loan-shark trap closed, and held them.

Caught in Trap.

In their anxiety to obtain the money needed for their health-trip in the country, these young women overlooked the fact that the School Committee had a standing order forbidding all teachers to dabble in stocks or accept loans from money brokers under any circumstances. The teacher who violates that order is subject to instant dismissal from the school. That's where the loan-shark was hoping to win, should his overcharges.

Their vacation period ended, these two teachers returned to Boston with the intention of clearing off the loan-shark's claim, but like thousands of other victims they soon found out that the more they paid him the more they owed.

With unfailing regularity they paid $10 a month out of their combined earnings, the note being made out in their joint names. And just as sure as the day rolled around, the avaricious loan-shark continued to call for another $10 on account.

Finally after the young women had managed to pay off $110 of the debt, although they had received only $100 in actual money when the loan originally was made, it commenced to dawn upon them that there was something wrong.

Lender Bound to Win.

This feeling of uneasiness was added to very appreciably when they called at the loan-shark's office, and were told that they still owed him $150, and that the $10 a month, which they had been paying, merely covered the interest charges, without lowering the principal named in the joint note itself.

Terror-stricken, they immediately laid their case before a woman friend, who holds a responsible position in a large business house, but the loan-shark's trap was too strong to be broken.

The young women learned that if they attempted to fight the case in court their discharge was sure to follow (for having disregarded the School Committee's order), while a failure to pay the usurious rates of the loan-shark meant that he would place an assignment on their salaries.

Neither Senator Tinkham nor Representative Cavanagh will divulge the names of these school-teacher victims of the merciless loan sharks of Boston, knowing full well that if their identity were disclosed they immediately would become amenable to the School Committee rule in question.

But, if there be the slightest doubt concerning the truth of the charge, the men who drafted the Tinkham-Cavanagh bill have affidavits to prove that the young women in question were compelled to pay $110 on a loan of $100, and still owe $150 to the loan sharks of this city.

MANY SLAIN IN LISBON BATTLE

LONDON, July 6.—News has reached here of a revolutionary revolt in Lisbon which resulted in scores of people being slain and the city turned into a state of panic. There was a fierce fight between the populace and the seamen quartered in barracks. Troops were rushed in from the frontiers to quell the revolt.

A strict censorship has been established and the only account of the revolt comes from a dispatch which a newspaper correspondent succeeded in filing in Badajos, Spain, to avoid censorship.

The seamen, incited by monarchistic agitators, attempted an armed revolt. The populace responded, using revolvers and knives. Scores are said to have been killed and injured in the hand-to-hand fight which followed. A call for all available troops was sent out by the government, and both cavalry and infantry responded. The seamen were quelled, only after the most desperate fighting.

Panic reigned throughout the city. Reports of further revolutionary outbreaks kept the people in a state of terror. It was learned by the government that the leader of the monarchists had recently received another important addition to the revolutionary trend in the shape of a remittance of $400,000 from Brazil.

A dispatch from Paris, Spain, says that the Portuguese government has dispatched several thousand troops to the northern frontier, following the discovery of a plot there to restore monarchy.

The conspiracy is said to have originated among certain officers of the Portuguese army at Valencia Do Minho, a city off Portugal on the Spanish frontier, just across the border from Tuy.

PATIENTS COOL IN BIG HOSPITAL FIRE

NEW YORK, July 6.—Fire threatened the St. Mary's Hospital, Brooklyn, to-day, but no quicker did the attendants work in extinguishing it that only a few of the 600 patients knew what had happened. Twenty-two little crippled children were within a few feet of the flames, but they remained remarkably cool, obeying the orders of the nurses. The blaze which did little damage, was put out after half an hour's effort.

TEACHERS GATHER IN SAN FRANCISCO

SAN FRANCISCO, July 6.—Delegates to the National Educational Association convention which opens here to-morrow night are arriving to-day in hordes. It is estimated that by noon to-morrow 20,000 will be here. Special trains from Boston, Baltimore, Philadelphia, Montreal, New York, St. Louis and Chicago are due. President Ella Flagg Young of Chicago arrived to-day.

Some of the 300 Children on Randidge Trip

The city boat Monitor is generally a grim old ship, for she takes prisoners to Deer Island. To-day, however, children of St. Joseph's parish in the West End made merry on the craft as she slid for Rumpkin Island and for a day's outing furnished by the Randidge Fund.

Three hundred laughing, cheering "kiddies," of assorted sizes and ages, all from St. Joseph's parish in the West End, embarked from the Eastern avenue dock today on the first of the Randidge Fund excursions bound for a day's outing on Rumpkin Island. Promptly at 9 o'clock the good ship "Monitor," with its happy cargo, in charge of Rev. J. H. Courtney, who had led the procession from St. Joseph's to the wharf, tooted twice, as if in defiance of the hot weather man, sped down the harbor.

At the Randidge Picnic Grounds, swings, baseball, running races, bean-bags for the girls, and many other things to delight the young idea, were provided. Best of all there was swimming. This year's circular says that the children must furnish their own suits. But there were no suits to be seen at the dock. The only clothing carried by the children was Mama had carefully "put up."

Among the things provided for the children were lemonade—gallons of it—and ice cream and oranges and all the other good things one can think of.

Those who assisted in taking charge of the party were Joseph A. Sullivan, John J. Fitzgerald, Leo Cusick, John Flanagan, Charles Gallagher, Miss Mary Sweeney, Miss Annie Boyle, Mrs. Mary Doherty, Miss Mary McInnis, Miss Nellie Gallagher and Patrolman Jeremiah O'Brien of Charlestown, who is a regular attendant upon all the excursions.

It is planned to have fifty similar excursions throughout the Summer, on suitable days, weather permitting, so that about 15,000 children will be given outings. To-morrow's party will consist of children from six Dorchester and Jamaica Plain churches.

ASKS FATHER TO O. K. BRIDE

NEW YORK, July 6.—A determined effort to see whether a freeborn American young man must stand for a board of directors' decision of his affair of the heart and whether he must get an official O. K. on his bride, will be made to-day by Thomas Franklin Manville, Jr., son of the asbestos king. He takes his twice-married wife from their Waldorf-Astoria suite into the heart of the Asbestos Trust and, after his father has an opportunity to see her, asks "Papa" Manville if he wouldn't have done as the son did.

Young Manville's troubles arose because he was only nineteen years old when he married pretty little Florence Hubel.

"I've changed my mind about getting married in Connecticut," he said to-day. "My wife and I have been married twice and if we make a habit of it it might seem that I was deliberately trying to invite trouble with my father.

"He is the most reasonable man I ever saw, and after he sees my wife and finds how happy we are I am quite sure he will agree with me that I did the best thing in the world for my own future.

"Every son has a right to talk to his father, and my father is no different from any other father. I imagine he will be about as glad to see me as I will be to see him, and instead of planning around getting the marrying habit I'll just put it up to him—man to man."

JEALOUS OF RIVALS GIRL WIELDS HATPIN

WILKES-BARRE, Pa., July 6.—Using a hatpin to prevent two other girls taking her sweetheart from her, Mildred Coyle was arrested and taken before Mayor Kniffen. Mary Williams and Mary Clark, who made the charges, declared that she tried to stab them with a hatpin. Miss Coyle told the Mayor that the other two girls were trying to induce her sweetheart to leave her; that she wanted him for herself and the other girls made her so angry that she drew a long pin from her hat and made them run away. She was fined $5 and costs.

EIGHT SAVED FROM A FIRE

Eight people were rescued to-day at a fire, which the police say was the work of an incendiary, in the three-story tenement house at No. 16 Pearl street, Charlestown. It was the fifth fire in the building within two months, and all have been of a suspicious origin. The State police are at work on the case.

Mrs. Mary Weinbecker, with her seven-months-old baby, found her escape cut off by the hallways of the first floor. Dennis J. Sullivan, foreman of Engine 27, took them out of a window.

On the second floor was Charles Kalajian and his wife Maggs and their two children, Margaret, aged four, and George, one year and eight months. Mr. Kalajian got his family out on to the fire escape and they were taken into an adjoining house by firemen.

On the top floor were Frank Reardon and his bride of two days. They fled to the fire escape, where firemen took them into another building.

It is the theory of the police that some demented person in the neighborhood is responsible for the fires. No oil has been used so far as the firemen have been able to detect. The fires have all started in the cellar between the partitions.

The fire to-day worked its way up between partitions to the top floor. The flames did not get into any of the tenements, but filled the hallways both in the front and back of the house, cutting off the escape of tenants except from the fire escape. The loss to-day is estimated at $1,500.

UNDERTAKER IS KILLED BY HEAT WHILE AT WORK

HUDSON, July 6.—While J. Henry Herrick, a local undertaker, was engaged in preparing the body of Mary Thornton Wheeler for burial he dropped dead of heart failure brought on by the heat. Another undertaker was called in to complete the embalming of Mrs. Wheeler and to care for Herrick's body. Herrick was sixty-two years of age and is survived by a widow.

SUSPEND RULES FOR ADMIRAL

WASHINGTON, July 6. The Japanese naval hero, Admiral Togo, hero of the battle of the Sea of Japan, will have no difficulty in seeing everything he cares to see in the New York Navy Yard, or indeed any other part of the naval establishment. Although a regulation of long standing prohibits the exhibition in the navy yards, this will be gladly suspended.

Nearly everybody in Boston reads the AMERICAN.

LORDS DEFIANT ON HOME RULE

LONDON, July 6.—By a vote of 283 to 46 the House of Lords has thrown down the gauntlet of challenge to the House of Commons on the question of home rule for Ireland.

This division took place last night on Lord Lansdowne's amendment to the veto bill. It contained as its leading feature the stipulation that the veto bill shall not apply to any act affecting the succession of the Crown or the Protestant succession, or the establishment of a national Parliament or a body with legislative powers in any portion of the kingdom.

Any such bill, save the Lansdowne amendment, cannot be passed into law until it has been submitted to the referendum.

This is what the Tories have been fighting for right along, and it is precisely what Premier Asquith says they must not have, since the country has already in three successive general elections, voted its opinion upon the issue of home rule.

During the debate last night Lord Haldane, Secretary for War, made it clear that the government will not accept the Lansdowne amendment.

The next move is now due from the Ministry. It will mean simply sending back the veto bill with the Lansdowne amendment cut out. Again it will come back to the Commons.

Then it will be up to Prime Minister Asquith to have a talk with the King.

How to Cure Dandruff

Dandruff can be cured by simply washing the hair and scalp with a shampoo composed of Refined Creamy Soap, Cochin Cocoanut Oil, White of Eggs, Glycerin and Salicylic Acid.

This removes all traces of scales or dandruff and makes the hair take on new life.

If you have been using common soap, try Birt's Head Wash, which is made of the above ingredients, and see the difference.

Ordinary soaps and shampoos contain an excess of alkali, which is bad for the scalp.

WOLGAST GIVES RIVAL BANQUET

By W. W. NAUGHTON.

SAN FRANCISCO, July 6.—It is not often that a world's champion gives a banquet and invites his "next" opponent to break bread and sip wine with him, but Ad Wolgast extended the hand of good fellowship to English Freddie Welsh in the manner described last evening.

The banquet room at Tait's was the scene of the festive gathering, and some of the choicest spirits of sporldom gathered around the board. Welsh being a vegetarian, was under a handicap. He had to restrict himself with olives, watercress and lettuce, while the others were discussing stewed crabs, squab, chicken and the stuff that bubbles in the glasses. He was on a par with the rest, however, while singing "For He's a Jolly Good Fellow" at the conclusion of the various toasts.

"Kid" Nelson was the toastmaster of the ovasion and among those bidden to the feast were Promoters Griffin and Coffroth, Referees Jack Welsh, Eddie Smith and Eddie Haulon, Pugilists Frank Klaus, Freddie Welsh and Jimmy Britt and Manager Tom Jones and Baron Long.

While the affair was largely a celebration of Wolgast's victory over Owen Moran, a little businesslike talk was indulged into the proceedings. As all the world knows, Wolgast and Welsh have signed preliminary articles bearing upon a championship contest in September and it was on this subject that several whispered discussions were held.

As Manager Jones and Champion Wolgast were to leave for Los Angeles on the 9 o'clock train they could not go into the matter to the fullest extent, but Jones outlined his position before leaving for the South.

"Welsh wants to box and we are willing to accommodate him," said Jones. "One of the terms called for in the agreement is a bet of $10,000. Wolgast's first forfeit of $1,000 in this connection is already in the hands of Stakeholder John T. Clark, but as far as I can learn, Welsh's money is not yet up. When he posts his $1,000 and makes the necessary arrangements to put the balance on August 10 we will begin to consider the matter of matching seriously. We are going to Los Angeles, but we can always be reached by wire and there will be no difficulty in completing the terms so far as our side is concerned. We feel ourselves committed to meet with Welsh in September, if he lives up to the preliminary agreement and if nothing comes of it Wolgast will not enter the ring until November and then it will be a case of first come, first served."

It was hinted that there may be more than one obstacle to the getting together of Welsh and Wolgast. Welsh, it is believed, will be able to secure backing to the extent of $10,000 from his native Wales, but it is said that he and Manager Long will want to have more to say in the selection of a referee, than Wolgast, as a rule, allows his opponents.

In making this demand Long points to the fact that there will be a large amount in issue in side stakes alone. Under the circumstances he says that no one can blame Welsh, or Wolgast either for that matter, for wishing to see that his interests are thoroughly protected.

It was also whispered around that Welsh is inclined to come in the shape of purse money than any of the local promoters have thus far been willing to receive, and this may act as a bar to the holding of the match.

Milton Clark of the Metropolitan Club, who is in line for the September permit, will try to bring the lightweight boxers to terms and Coffroth and Graney also might that he is also in the field as a bidder for the attraction. Jim Coffroth is not say where he proposed to put the men in the ring, but is willing to give assurances that if the bout falls to him, it will be handled in proper style and at a suitable location.

JEFFRIES TO BE BUSINESS MAN

CHICAGO, July 6.—James J. Jeffries, the only world's champion heavyweight that ever hated the public, and whose feud of long standing with Jack Johnson is expected to result in a fight to the finish, is through with the game. He will never go at Reno merely emphasized his dislike of crowds, is in Chicago en route to California.

Jeffries laughs at the idea that he was neglected by the British public during coronation week. The ex-champion admitted that Johnson had cut quite a dash with his chameleon-colored Rolls-Royce up and down Piccadilly and the Haymarket, "but then," said he, "Johnson likes that sort of notoriety."

Jeffries said he didn't mix up much on the other side. "All that stuff is for advertising purposes," said he, "and I don't have to do any advertising. I'm out of the fight game for all time. I never had any use for it and you couldn't drag me back into a ring with bull flies.

"I had to stop off here to see my old friend, Frank Chance, who has been playing in pretty hard luck. I think he is one of the gamest I ever knew and he deserves to have his ambition realized—that of bringing home another pennant to Chicago."

Jeffries smiled reminiscently as he talked of the fight with Johnson that lost him his title. He said: "All I can say is I tried hard. I'm a business man now. My trip abroad did me a lot of good. I've got a fresh point of view and feel fit to get into the real game of life—business."

Jack Gleason, who, with Tex Rickard, promoted the Reno battle, in which Jeff met defeat, sat near him in the grandstand at a ball game, but the former champion did not seem to be looking for close communion with anybody. He weighs 255 pounds.

DARTMOUTH GETS NEW CRACK ATHLETE

NEW YORK, July 6.—Among the prominent High school athletes in Brooklyn going to college is Al Gallagher, the crack all-around performer of Erasmus Hall. "Gall" is slated for Dartmouth College.

Gallagher has figured in nearly every department of athletics in the scholastic calendar. His favorite game is football, and he shows up on the gridiron in the backfield like a general on a battlefield. His work with the 1910 Erasmus team was as fine as anything seen in High school football campaigns in some years. As a baseball player Gallagher plays a good second base. He has figured also on the Erasmus Hall basketball, track and swimming teams. As a swimmer he is one of the best in the ranks of the local schoolboy athletes. This event will probably put him a member of the Sheepshead Bay Rowing Club. Al has signified the all-around athletic championship title at Erasmus Hall next year, and with the New Hampshire college will secure a splendid acquisition.

HEDLUND WILL LAY UP UNTIL SUMMER IS OVER

Oscar F. Hedlund, the great miler of the Brookline Gymnasium Association, after having scored a clean-cut victory over Abel R. Kiviat, senior mile champion of the A. A. U., will not put a running shoe on again this Summer until the Canadian championships.

This is Hedlund's fourth year in athletics, and upon his sixth race with Kiviat he feels that he has only won over the Irish-American A. C. man has brought him enough prestige to give a vacation from the cinder path.

WOLGAST TAKES M'FARLAND ON

SAN FRANCISCO, July 6.—Ad Wolgast, flushed with his victory over Owen Moran, has decided to meet Packey McFarland either September 7 or 9. The latter date is "Admission Day" in California and there has always been a static attraction decided there on that day.

In securing McFarland and Wolgast for his attraction Jimmy Coffroth, the fight promoter of the Pacific coast, has secured easily the greatest light-weight match to be had. Wolgast has given way to the demands of McFarland and will allow the latter to come in at 133 pounds five hours before the contest begins. In accepting under the conditions it shows that the champion at least holds no fear for the Chicago boxer. Wolgast surely demonstrates what he is capable of doing when in his right stride by his defeat of Owen Moran, who was thought to have the better chance than any. McFarland will be hard proposition for the champion to dispose of and in the event of Wolgast defeating the Chicago boxer he would be hailed as the greatest light-weight in history.

The terms of agreement stipulates that the fight shall be for twenty rounds or more and will take place sometime in September, preferably on Labor Day; that each fighter shall post $10,000 a side bet and that the lightweight limit of 133 pounds shall be made at the ringside. Wolgast has already posted $10,000 with stakeholder Jack Welch. Welch will receive $1,000 forfeit and under the terms of agreement must post the other $9,000 not later than August 10.

RULES VIOLATED, IS NOT A RECORD

NEW YORK, July 6.—Martin Sheridan made a record throw with the discus at the athletic carnival held by the city at McCarren Park in Brooklyn. He hurled the answer sought missile 141 feet 1½ inches, but as it was not made according to all the A. A. U. rules it will probably not be accepted. In this event R. Glat of the Seattle A. C. finished second. The Irish-American A. C. champion outclassed his field and won by nearly forty feet.

ARMORY BOUT IS CALLED OFF

The weather man has added some more victims to his long list. The boxing fans suffer from his move. The bout at the Armory A. A. billed for to-night between Bob Moran and Jimmy Gardner has been called off on account of the intense heat.

The Armory directors met this morning and voted for the above move. The boxers were notified and they seem satisfied.

The bout will not be lost to this city, however, for the Armory will stage the same men at the regular meet next Tuesday.

REVERE BEACH TRACK TO HAVE FAST EVENTS

The professional sprinters will make their reappearance at the Revere cycle track next Saturday evening in a two-mile national championship event and half-mile handicap. These two events will bring the best men in the country together, and the race for first honors promises to be a warm one. Kramer and Clarke will start from scratch in the half-mile handicap. Among a few of the star sprinters who will be seen are Willie Fenn, Pedler Palmer, Ernest Jokus, Worth Mitten, Fred Hill, Jumbo Wells, Joe Fogler, Eddie Root, Floyd McFarland, Alfred Goulette, Lawson Williams and several others.

The two-mile national championship event will be run off in half-mile heats, the first two men in each event to qualify for the semifinals. The fifteen-mile motor-paced event must be run off in one heat.

COIN FLIP MADE PACKEY A BOXER

By ED W. SMITH.

CHICAGO, July 6.—They ought to call him Flip McFarland instead of Packey.

It was a flip of a coin that decided the stock yard boy's ring future.

Fact, too, and no press agent yarn about the clever Chicago fighter.

And it wasn't so very long ago, either, that Packey was of a serious mind to chuck the whole thing and go into a more legitimate and less strenuous game than that of changing other fighters' features.

Packey was sore because it didn't look as if a flivver—the real little Hal Coffman black boy with the large hammer—that was following him, was ever going to leave off the trail.

He asked his friends and debated with himself. His mother was for having him quit, but, of course, the boy, with a big career ahead of him, was hesitating.

Flips With a Lucky Coin.

It must have been a lucky coin that Packey pulled out of his pocket when he couldn't make up his mind any other way. He flipped it into the air with the best side for going on with fighting and the nil side for the quiet life.

Packey trembled while the silver piece was shimmering in the air and couldn't pluck up courage for a minute or so to look at it when it had settled on the carpet.

It was heads.

The very next day Packey happened to meet Emil Thiry. Packey didn't save any manager and declared he didn't want one. He got talking to Thiry about the prospects and changed his mind instantly.

"Will you go with me and look after things?" Packey asked.

"Bet your life I will," was the ready reply, and a powerful alliance was therupon formed.

Has Never Battled Here.

It is a strange fact that Packey hated the boxing game at one time. He revels in it now, enjoys every moment of it—and best of all, is making himself an independently rich man by his able manner in which he and Thiry handle their affairs.

And it is another strange fact that this clever fighter, in whom the whole city ought to take pride, has never boxed in Chicago except in his native city.

Packey really is a product, in a fighting sense, of Davenport, Ia. He did most of his early fighting there and he had the real-blooded young men quite daby about him.

In the brief space of eighteen months Packey boxed nine main items, knocking out the first seven of them in all the way from two to nine rounds.

This list includes Kid Breyer, Tommy Moir, Billy Finnegan, Fred Gilmore, Young Morris, Steve Kinney and Joe Galligan.

In addition he bested Abe "Kid" Goodman and Kid Herman.

Fights Before the Militia.

"This latter battle, a fifteen-round affair, will stand out in ring history as one of the most unique ever contested. It was fought out in the presence of a troop of militia, that the towerman had ordered to stop it.

It wasn't long after this that he and Battling Nelson went on for an exhibition at Brooke's Casino for the benefit of the newsboys. He bested the then champion in clear-cut style and started an argument that was felt for months and months afterward, the Dane paying little attention to Packey's importunities for a real match.

The nearest Packey came to being beaten was when townsmen was on April 7, this year, when he knocked out Morris Bloom in Kenosha, Wis.

BELLOWS AFTER SPEEDWAY RACE

Fred H. Bellows, owner of the fast pacing gelding Caffeno, 2:07¼, is out with a sweeping challenge to match W. J. McDonald's pacing gelding Chief Wilkie, 2:12¾, for the championship of the Charles River speedway, the event to take place at any time and over any of the local speedways or Combination Park, the distance to be half-mile or mile heats, single dash, two heats in three, or three in five.

Caffeno and Chief Wilkie have met twice this season, both times at Charles River speedway, and each has a victory to their credit. It is peculiar, too, that in both instances the time made was the same, Caffeno winning in 1:04 and 2:02½, while Chief Wilkie's time was 1:02¼ and 1:04.

Under this condition of affairs Bellows fails to see how McDonald can claim to owning the champion pacer of the speedway. He says that it is far from him to do so with Caffeno, though in the racing to date he believes he has just as good a hold on the title as does McDonald. It is to definitely decide the championship that Bellows is seeking the present match.

Bellows, too, shows how he fell into bad racing luck in the last match through John Conkler's pacing mare, Easter Direct, breaking and swerving over in front of Caffeno in both heats. Has this not have happened Bellows feels certain he would have defeated Chief Wilkie in the race.

SCHAEFER PREFERS NOT TO BE CATCHER

Germany Schaefer, the witty and wobbly third baseman of the Washington team, was slated for the job of utility catcher by the newspapers of the capital in case anything happened to John Henry, the lone backstop, who is carrying the white man's burden for that aggregation.

However, Schaefer had distinctly different ideas. The centerfield will is littered with signs, and the batter, catcher and umpires have a tough time seeing the ball. So when the Schaefer name was sent to McAleer with a loud and vociferous roar.

"Nothing doing on that stunt, Jim," said Schaefer. "I want to hold on to this bean of mine for the rest of the season. I don't mind getting a rap on the head when I flounder around the sun field, but nix on the catching stuff. That doesn't go with yours truly. I need my noggin, and I don't want any of the 'don't-be-look-natural' thing pulled on me."

RED SOX BOUND TO WESTWARD

Drat these wilting managers anyway! They have a horrid habit of pulling our prizes on us in a way we don't like. Hal Chase did it, he ribbed us into the notion that we were going to win the Yankees in the last game and then he goes and swipes Russell Ford on us just as we had forgotten that he was being held in pickle. And Ford won his game.

Now comes Mr. McAleer of Washington and plays the same scurvy trick. When we had got to feeling good, and saying that there was nothing to it and that we would whang the fights out of the Senators for a get-away performance, this same McAleer person ... out the elongated Walter Johnson, who straightway proceeds to hang the albatross ... tied up with a fancy bunch of crepe.

All of which is by way of saying that when the Red Sox left on their Western trip last night they had just been laid low by the Senators and ... they retired in the awful heat of to-day they are burdened with chagrin and mortification. And goodness knows, that is an awful load to carry into a town like St. Louis.

Well, there's no use wheezing about it now. The game is on and got away to be hung out and read against the Red Sox in September when the returns are all in. No use trying to dispute the fact. The licking the Washingtons gave us was a licking with trimmings. I wasn't until the eighth inning ... that we had a look in and then only long enough to prevent a shutout. A passed ball and the ... Mr. Conroy's mind added ... that is crawling out of the whitewash bucket. Small favors, like ... are always welcome but we prefer to have them come when we need a run or two to tie and not when we are just as well off with no runs as with two.

Both sides had the same number of hits but the Red Sox errors helped the visitors to their ... victory. The game was really won in the seventh inning when Washington piled up a quartette of scores that had no excuse for being. Moser, Foster and Williams all had a hand in ... clinch rope and we quit the red carpet. Washington's other runs were all legitimate.

As a special meeting of the Tung American Malgamated National Leeg" Dugnates yesterday afternoon in President Umpstead's back parlor, it was decided not to charge any admission for to-day's game.

Taking into consideration that to-day's battle will be a championship affair and between two such teams as the Wasps and Starfish Giants, anybody given to serious thought can perjure to themselves the noble kind of kite that will be piled on the fence and in the grand stand at 3:30 this afternoon.

He Meant Well, But—

Ike Hemberry's Intentions Were Good, Only They Were Never Realized

By KENNETT HARRIS.

"BILL'S one of these yer fellers who wants to have their pie fist an' soon's they set up to the table," observed Simon Baker, professedly. "He can't wait, Bill can't."

"I'm a right smart tha-e-way myself," said Washington Hancock. I don't know but what I'd rather be that than like Ike Hemberry, as used to live over in Catfish Bend. His allus looked so powerful good like he didn't have the heart to tackle its 'pearance by mtin' into it. Not but what he aimed to eat it when he done et his boundary grits an' grease and taters. You kin see Ike's countenance up to the Turkle Hurryin' around by the Birkwell vault now I'se lot o' longed to the family from 'way back yander."

What about it?" queried the storekeeper.

Nothin much," chuckled Hancock. "It happened to think of it. But it's a fact. Ike missed many a dish of fried chicken 'count o' bein' too plumb full o' pork an' greens to relish it. Right well liked, like was. Had a good start from his daddy to begin with, an' walked hard an' skimped an' scraped to add to it. It must have been powerful hard on him, too, because he was a nachell born spender. He'd own up to that himself.

"Some of these yer fine days when the wind's from the southwest you all will see me turn loose an' make the money fly," says he. "I aim to rip the kitchen outen the universe when I get enough to make de-outh while," he says. "Until that time comes, I'll just plug along, but there ain't a goin' to be nothin' too good for me nocet I turn loose."

Simple Ike sot married. I reckon he told the gal a heap about what he allowed to do, because she was kine o' disappointed when he broke it to her that there wasn't a goin to be no weddin' trip.

Bright Promises

"Not right dumpin, honey," he says. "You wait an' we'll have the finest kine of a weddin' trip. We hain't a goin' to stop at St. Joe. We'll go right on to Niagry Falls an' Paris, France. We won't do things by halves. I aim to be fixed so expense won't be no object when we stand pat. We'll stop at the best hotels there is an' ride around in hacks an' buy anythin' we take a notion to. I allow there hain't nobuddy in these parts ever had such a weddin' trip as we'll have. But until then," he says, 'I reckon we'll just plug along. Now I see that when the time comes. But until then,' says he, 'we'll just sort of plug along.'

"Well, mebbe it must be just as well to wait,' says she. I'd like a brick house mighty well.'

"Just to show it wasn't all talk, like, would sure enough buy somethin' every once in a while. One time it was a new top buggy, an' a nickel plate set o' harness, an' another time he bought him a two hundred dollar gold watch, but he wouldn't never wear the watch for fear somebody'd rob him of it or he'd lose it, so he locked it up in a tin box an' hid the box in the rafters. Same way with the buggy. He wasn't a goin' to have the shine took off drivin' it around over the roads—not for a while. 'We kin plug along with the ol' buckboard for a spell, reckon,' says he.

She Got the Same

That was a mighty curious thing, but inside of a few years Ike's wife got to be the same way he was. She'd got her idees away up an' her intentions was to have new! Ike, he allus let her, and she allowed they'd be heaps o' time, an' she didn't aim to rush matters. She'd put up jelly an' peach pizzerves an' sorghum ever' year, but they was allus too good for common, so she an' Ike would make out with sorghum molasses or dried apples an' keep the goodies down cellar until they got a two-inch crust o' blue mold on 'em.

"It got so after a while that they wasn't neither one o' them as so'ry as they uster be, but they kept right on a-acting in the same ol' way, an' Ike's house that he'd built in the Bend when he got married an' ever Sarah's could—so—to—speak—and thatched up in front of Jane Allen's store in Turkle Hunt dropped to pieces an' ever Monday mornin' Ike's wife'd be humbled over her washboard, an' when Ike wanted to know what time it was, he'd look at the sun an' figger as nigh as he could.

"But that there wasn't a goin' to last an' keep on. So, sirree. You go around an' talk with Ike an' he'll tell you that he done wukked hard all my life,' says she, 'an' now I'm a-goin' to take things easy an' have a good time. I reckon I'll take my money with me,' says he, 'an' I wont me well have some good of it while I am here. Money wasn't made fur to keep, an' when a feller's lived hard he ain't a-goin' to a good time all the more. I may be wrong, but that's the way I look at it.'

"Finely the took place an' and, but he had his ideas of what was fitten to the last.

"Lucella,' he says to his wife 'when I'm gone, hope you all'll g—this yer Turk-ish-bi-ram Grow—ery—ceddin' but I want a monument over my mortable mouldment. I don't want no cheap marble, either. An' there's got to be a angel on it holdin' a pan wrutth an' I want the lettern' done in this way bronze metal suthin' stylish. I don't keer what it costs. I've got that comin' to me anyway.'

"I reckon you have, Ike,' says she. I'll sure see to it that you get some hind after money Ike has."

"He kep' still for a while after that, an' then opened his eyes an' says: Lo-la—Wait a minute, sugar pie.'

"And that there monument—says he 'Co-se there hain't no rush about it. I aim to have it in the way I said, but I reckon I kin plug along with the ol' tombstun that's there for a while."

A Successful Wife

TO-DAY'S INSTALMENT
By G. DORSET

Copyright, 1910, by Harper & Brothers.

PART TWO—(Continued)

IT was an hour he was back again. I saw he couldn't sleep, and he remained talking with me for a couple of hours.

"I am passing through a crisis, Esther—mental and spiritual, I tell you like. Sleep and food are as though they were not; but now that I speak of food, I see that I am decidedly hungry! What do you think you could find me?"

I went down-stairs and managed to get him a little luncheon; it took time, and when I came up he was lying on my bed sound asleep, the light full in his eyes. I made it dark and covered him as well as I could, and went myself to his room.

For a week neither of us slept between two and four o'clock, and there was something on every night in the way of dinners. I often went alone, as the tariff discussion kept my husband so closely at the Capitol, and when he was not with his party he was with Mrs. Temple. He grew more restless, more nervous at what he didn't prepare in his committee-rooms he prepared at my bedside.

I had the feeling that she was against his new point of view, and Stephen was so honest and so clear in his own mind that I was sure nothing should alter him or affect him, and I began to understand that he found it sympathetic to carve out his dreams by my side.

Senator Bellars Calls

I was sitting dictating a lot of letters to Van Bureu when Senator Bellars sent up word to ask if he could see me, and although his visits were no surprise as a rule, this one was unexpected, for he had been seriously ill, and no one had bothered him much about politics.

This sudden call made me think back to anachetistics, when the servant had announced me up his card the first day in her nosy fingers. Van Buren with my letters and his note-book slipped out in his quiet way as Senator Bellars came in. He was seventy-two, and a magnificent old man—splendid white hair, thick as a bush, and keen eyes hiding behind shaggy brows.

He kissed me, he often did, he was tender with me, and I could count the times tenderness had down in at my windows. He had been housed for six weeks and we had seen him, even politics had not been mentioned to him—his doctors had forbidden it.

"Now tell me," he said sharply "what the dues-d does it mean about Stephen?"

"He's at the Capitol now, I answered. "he didn't have any idea you would be out to-day."

I was making a fire of himself, Esther God alone knows what materials have gone toward constructing that mercurial, ill balanced, talented man. As far as I can see, Stephen is now on the road to political ruin as fast as he can go. Why, he has lost the esteem and applaud of the country! Really Stephen he is going insane."

"I understand that he caught the vice-president's new long enough today to give vent to some lunatic fanatical ideas that were a disgrace to the Democratic party. He has a disorganized mind, my dear child! You'll laugh at it, but say just your husband is going to stand for the trade of the century! Of course they'll try to do it."

Stephen's uncle waited a minute, and I didn't laugh.

"You don't realize, of course, what it means Esther He will ruin himself with his party

Not Pledged

I interrupted him to say that whatever Stephen did he was sincere, and the Senator repeated, scornfully.

"Sincere? He's a sentimentalist and a dreamer. I'm beginning to think he is out of his career here. Sentimentality doesn't go in politics or anything else."

I said that Stephen wasn't pledged to any tariff platform for his State, and his uncle retorted:

"No, not pledged; the industries of Nevada aren't those that will make the state a heavy sufferer by any tariff bill. He doesn't realize that he is not an individual, but a party. High tariff is an unwritten law of the times, and every man's duty is to promote it."

I said: "I think Nevada leaves things pretty much in Stephen's hands; they worship him."

Senator Bellars changed his position on the sofa, and turned around to me, and exclaimed: "You don't seem to realise, my dear woman, that he is going to ruin himself."

I remember very well what my husband had said years ago about his uncle's timid try to question at issue

"Everything he does is in the line of sentimental emotionalism, egotism, and—"

I was knitting. I had taken up my work when Van Buren went out; it was a white thing and small. I was helping Corbella.

"Uncle," I said, "I don't believe you care for Stephen."

Senator Bellars pulled at his mustache and snorted:

"Nonsense!"

"You don't love him, anyway."

He growled again. "I love you, Esther Kirkland," he nodded his gray head, "devilly, and I have had an old-fashioned anger and fury on me for some time." His eyes were on my work. It had the little sleeves in.

"Don't ask me what I'm making," I told him quickly, before he could do so. "It's for a friend."

"Humph!" he grunted, got out his cigars, cut one, and lit it. "I've come purposely to talk to you alone on this subject. He turned forward gorgily. "You must get Steve out of this state of mind. Go at this, Esther, as you've gone at everything else and save your husband."

He waited a moment and stopped, and I knew what he thought, it was strange to see it in the face of another person, and it made me catch my breath. I knew that he thought suddenly—perhaps Esther hasn't any influence with him at all!

Her Influence

I didn't say anything. I determined that I'd school myself to the taking and I counted aloud as I turned the neck of the jacket.

His eyes left my face as he said, slowly:

"Stephen I've heard never have arrived at this point out for some outside influence—he's been in feminine—" He waited. "I speak to you, Esther," he went on, slowly, "as I would speak to his friend—his sister his equal."

I put down the baby's jacket down and looked at him.

"Speak to me as you would speak to Stephen's wife, dear, that is what I am after all."

Looking at the end of his cigar, he answered shortly:

"Well then, I can't speak to you at all." And his brows gathered and darkened as if he had given up a cause that he cherished a story.

"Then shall I? ask to you uncle You mean Mrs. Tempest has influenced Stephen to change his party and his views and his platform—to go on more boldly in his way of thinking than he would otherwise have dared to do?"

He replied, sourly: "Yes since you are so generous as to put the thing in words—yes."

"Well, then," I said, "I think she is to be admired."

He started violently "God bless my soul!" he cried, "are you entirely mad?" I went on, quite calmly, "I think that is what a woman is good for—to urge a man on, to keep him to be big enough to dare, in spite of custom and policy and to speak out what he thinks, to change his views whenever he thinks he ought to, to change his career if he likes, if he is sure it's what he wants to go back and forth until he finds the right place. If Mrs. Tempest has done this for Stephen if she is doing it, why, she's a good influence."

The Senator sat looking at me. He was slapping his knees "Why, you're perfectly crazy" he cried "You see your husband ruining himself with his party—running himself with—" He got up.

And I said "Wait until you see Stephen, you haven't heard his side. Wait And he ought at this exactly

"I only hope he has a side I hope he is only going through a phase, but his fantastic mind is not to be reined upon"

He came back to me, for he had been walking around in his old excited way, weak as he was, and sat down again. "You astound me. I don't know what you're made of—what you mean" He poured his throat "You refer to the influence of another woman in your husband's life—of, as you call it, her 'urging him on'; you speak of her with a calmness, a tranquility—" He paused.

"How would you have me speak?"

Lysander John Utters a Soliloquy on Women After His Birthday

WHEN troubles come to a man in his office he lacks the great comfort afforded his wife under similar conditions—that of weeping on the kitchen towel.

Lysander John Appleton had longed sorely all day for some homely little comforter like this, and had hurried home earlier than usual that he might find sympathy in pouring out his soul to his two pillow-fashion ladies.

"Pouring out his soul," however, is not the way Lysander would have expressed it; "pouring out one's soul" is a woman's term, really meaning garrulity, and what ever else may be said against Lysander John it cant be said he talked like a woman.

His wife and daughter had gone to one of their many societies formed for the purpose of lapooing mankind, and Lysander John threw up his chair before the lounge on which the two pillow cushions reposed in all the dignity a thorough stuffing can give them.

"The women," said Lysander John, giving a characteristic look over his shoulder to see if his wife heard him, "are getting foolisher every day."

Such a bald thing for Lysander John to say, that he frightened even himself with his boldness, and the rest of his complaint was delivered in a whisper

"Did you see what happened here last night?" he continued "I was wondering why my wife and daughter were hanging around looking so important, when there was a ring at the door, and my wife admitted ten men! A surprise, she said, because it was my birthday. And she hasn't spoken to me since because I wasn't tickled to death.

"You will find something on the dining-room table to eat" she said, 'I provided a Dutch lunch because I know you men like such wicked things, and Daysey Mayme and I will spend the evening over with you may have a Real Tough time by yourselves'.

"Lad-es,' said Lysander John, talking louder in his excitement, 'what do you think she had provided for a Dutch lunch for eleven men? Six decent cigars, one loaf of ra-ther [illegible] and a bottle of beer! Two bottles of Beer!

"Now don't get drunk' she said as she left. 'I want my husband's friends to have a good time, but I don't want to find any of them under the table when I return!'

And when she came in after they had left good bone and I was in bed trying to forget my humiliation, I heard her say to Daysey Mayme: 'I wont tell your father in the morning I will let him sleep off his Terrible Bust Head

"Bust head. Eleven men and two pint bottles of beer! Is my wife [illegible] than other women, or are they all alike?

But the pillow cushions, knowing no more about woman than man himself knows, couldn't answer

Beauty Hints

To the Beauty Editor Can you tell me of any harmless way to increase the bust? I do not want any more flesh on the hips or other parts of my body, but I am so flat-chested I would be very thankful if you thought would give me even two or three inches development. ANNA H.

The only thing I know of that will develop the bust without increasing the size of the hips, or without putting on flesh where not needed, is a preparation put up by The Dr Kelly Co., especially for small and undeveloped breasts. It is the discovery of a woman physician whose practice was largely confined to women and in whose hands it creates the best measure ever to six inches in a month. I believe I am safe in saying to you, Mrs. G. A., Buffalo N Y., and they will send you a trial package of the treatment without charge. This is said to be effective in cases of the most decided development of the bust, and will give a full, beautiful form without fleshy growths, knowing that the treatment was used.

Many mothers have told me that after the baby had been weaned the breasts became flabby and shrunken, but the use of Dr Kelly's prescription made them full and firm. The test one feels of has been so long a secret that no one has had to suffer on the period health. Send a letter to them and they will send you a free sealed package that explains the treatment in plain envelope. Do not confuse this with any of the many worthless preparations offered.

To the Beauty Editor

How can I restore the youthful color and looks of my hair? It is getting gray and streaked and makes me look much older than I am.

MRS. W. G. P. W.

Many women are now restoring their hair to its natural color by the use of Mary T. Goldman's Hair Restorer and are surprised at the results. It is a perfectly harmless preparation and can be had for $1.00 with an Queen Lily hair restorer from Houghton & Dutton or James Dog Store. It is perfectly harmless, restores the natural color with one application, leaves the hair soft and fluffy, and its use cannot be detected.

Desperate Desmond

Although Desperate Desmond sees a lighted bomb whirling around the boat of Claude Eclaire, he resolves to capture Rosamond at any cost. If a villain lacks determination he will never get very far, and if Desmond lacked determination Claude would have long since conquered him. However, the villain has plenty of resolution, and we see him quit as often as we see a fly fall.

With a lighted bomb at the end of a long string whirling around his boat, Claude feels sure that his rival will not attempt to steal Rosamond. Thus we see that Claude's great mistake lies in underestimating his antagonist. There could be nothing more foolish, as we shall see when Desmond forms a plan.

As the whirling bomb is about to hit Desmond, he tips up the bow of his boat from out the water. Then he and his allies, whose backs are as black as midnight, and their hearts are as black as their backs, surround the boat and the line twists around it. To the onlookers it looks as though the bomb must now take place close to the villain's boat. Yet, sometimes desperate measures are best as we see from rats during plan, never

Desperate Desmond is in possession of the boat! The wounded Claude now finds himself in the water, while his allies, whose backs are as black as midnight, and their hearts are as black as their backs, surround the boat and the line twists around it. To the onlookers it looks as though the bomb must now take place close to the villain's boat. Yet, sometimes desperate measures are best as we see from rats during plan, never

It is pleasant work to succeed in the Wounded on foot but not to be outdone, he and his allies will dash the wounds Claude against a solid object, which is already tried to Rosamond. There is nothing to stop us there to rescue the terrible fate that now seems to be saved in to-morrow's paper.

Married Life the Second Year

By MABEL HERBERT URNER

Helen's Return to Boston and Her Plans to Surprise Warren

DELIA O'DONOGHUE Boring, Mass., May 10, 1910.

Miss HELEN L. CURTIS,
340 Wash. Ave., Chicago, Ill.

My Dear Miss Curtis:

It is indeed sad this message from Delia. It would be declared a cruel joke were it not for the fact that I know Delia would never be guilty of such a thing. Besides, I have received a letter from Warren telling me of his sorrow.

Poor, poor Delia! She had started so gaily on her journey. Warren had written me that he was sending her a ticket and that he would meet her at the station. I can imagine how she felt when, after waiting and watching for him in the crowded train shed, she realized that he was not there. Poor child! She must have thought that he had forgotten her. Then, when she found that he had sent a telegram, she must have been overcome with grief. Poor Delia! Poor Warren!

Warren's telegram, which I have just received, explains everything. He says that he was unavoidably detained at the office on account of a business matter which he could not neglect. He says that he has written Delia a letter explaining the matter and asking her to remain in Chicago until he can get away. He says that he will be there the following week.

Of course, I shall write to Delia at once and tell her that I will be glad to have her visit me. I am sure that she will enjoy it, and I am sure that I shall enjoy having her with me. I have not seen her since we were children, and I am looking forward to her visit with much pleasure.

Warren says that he is very busy at the office these days, and that he is working very hard. He says that he is trying to get a vacation in order to come to Boston to see me. I am sure that he will succeed in getting one, for he is a very good boy and deserves a vacation.

Yours very truly,
HELEN L. CURTIS.

Helen folded the letter and slipped it into her pocket. She was very glad to receive it, for it relieved her mind of a great deal of worry. She had been worrying about Delia ever since she had left Chicago, and she was glad to know that she was safe and well.

She was standing on the platform of the station, waiting for the train that was to take her to Boston. She was dressed in a neat traveling suit, and carried a small satchel in her hand. She was looking forward to her visit with much pleasure, for she had not been home for several years, and she was anxious to see her parents and friends.

The train arrived on time, and Helen boarded it. She found a seat near the window, and settled herself comfortably for the journey. She was glad that she had decided to take the train instead of the boat, for she did not like the water, and she was afraid that she might get seasick.

The journey was a pleasant one, and Helen enjoyed every minute of it. She looked out of the window at the passing scenery, and thought of the surprise that she would give Warren when she arrived in Boston. She knew that he would be very much surprised to see her, and she was looking forward to his surprise with much pleasure.

When the train arrived in Boston, Helen was met at the station by her parents and friends. They were very glad to see her, and they all went home together in a carriage. Helen was very happy to be home again, and she enjoyed her visit very much.

A Chance to Rest

As soon as they were gone I sat down and began to think. I had a very busy day before me, and I knew that I would need all the rest I could get. So I decided to lie down and take a little nap.

I was still in the best humor when the officer on the train had left me, and I was soon asleep.

I was awakened by a loud noise, and when I looked up I saw that the train had stopped at a station. I looked out of the window and saw that we were in the suburbs of Boston. I knew that I would soon be there, and I began to get ready to leave the train.

I had been asleep for about an hour, and I felt very much refreshed. I washed my face and hands, and then I combed my hair and put on my hat. I was just finishing my toilet when the train stopped at the station.

I picked up my satchel and my umbrella, and left the car. I looked around me, but I did not see any of my friends. I thought that they must have been delayed, and that they would arrive later. So I decided to wait for them.

I sat down on a bench and began to read a newspaper that I had bought on the train. I had been reading for about half an hour when I heard a voice behind me. It was a man's voice, and it said:

"Excuse me, but are you Miss Curtis?"

I looked up and saw a young man standing before me. He was a stranger to me, but he had a very pleasant face, and I thought that he must be a friend of some one I knew. So I answered:

"Yes, I am Miss Curtis."

"I thought so," he said. "I am very glad to meet you. My name is Thompson. I am a friend of your brother Warren. He asked me to meet you and take you to his office. He is very busy, and he could not come himself."

I was very much surprised at this, but I thought that it was all right, so I said:

"Very well, I will go with you."

He took my satchel and led the way to the street. There was a carriage waiting there, and he helped me into it. Then he got in himself, and we drove off.

I thought that we were going to Warren's office, but I soon found that we were not. We drove for a long time, and I began to get very much surprised. At last I said:

"Where are we going? I thought that we were going to Warren's office."

He laughed, and said:

"We are going to a place where we can get something to eat. I am very hungry, and I am sure that you must be also."

I was very much surprised at this, but I thought that it was all right, so I said nothing more. We drove for a long time, and at last we stopped at a large building. He got out and helped me out. Then he led me into the building.

We went up in the elevator to the fifth floor, and then he led me to a door and knocked. The door was opened by a man, and we went in. I looked around me, and saw that we were in a large room. There were a number of people in the room, and they were all looking at me.

I was very much surprised at this, and I began to feel very much frightened. I looked at the man who had brought me there, and said:

"What does this mean? Where is Warren?"

He laughed, and said:

"Warren is not here. He is in Chicago. I am sorry to tell you that he has been married for some time, and that his wife is very much annoyed at your visit. She has sent me to tell you that you must leave at once."

POPE PRAISES AMERICAN LEADERSHIP IN THE MOVEMENT FOR WORLD PEACE

WE are happy to learn from you that in the United States of America, under the leadership of men enjoying the highest authority with the people, the more judicious members of the community are fervently desirous of maintaining the advantages of international peace. To compose differences, to restrain the outbreak of hostilities, to prevent the dangers of war, to remove even the anxieties of so called armed peace, is, indeed, most praiseworthy, and any effort in this cause even although it may not immediately or wholly accomplish its purpose, manifests, nevertheless, a zeal which cannot but redound to the credit of its authors and be of benefit to the State

This especially true at the present day when vast armies, instrumentalities most destructive to human life, and the advanced state of military science portend wars which must be a source of fear even to the most powerful rulers. Wherefore we most heartily commend the work already begun, which should be approved by all good men, and especially by us, holding, as we do, the supreme pontificate of the church, and representing him who is both the God and the Prince of Peace, and we most gladly lend the weight of our authority to those who are striving to realize this most beneficent purpose.—From Letter of Pope Pius to the American Apostolic Delegate, Mgr. Falconio.

INTERNATIONAL TRUST IN STEEL

BRUSSELS, July 6—On the motion of Judge Elbert H. Gary, chairman of the executive committee of the United States Steel Corporation, 16 delegates, representing the interests of America, Canada, England, France, Germany, Belgium, Austria and Spain, had voted to form an international association. A committee will be appointed, representing all the groups, to prepare a plan of organization.

The adoption of this report will launch the first international trust—a combination of the interests engaged in the world's greatest industry, a combination behind which there will be a power and influence and influence far exceeding that which can be wielded by some of the world's leading nations.

Judge Gary was elected chairman of the conference, the taking of the chair to be explained at length his views concerning a high tariff and the protection of labor.

"Suppose," said he, "that a company of men engaged in business and possessing much capital, with power and influence in it by their unjust or oppressive conduct call down unprovoked disapproval, disgust and antagonism on the part of the publicit is a brief space of time these men would be driven out of business.

"Suppose a producer of any commodity for sale should in any way within his power ill treat all of his customers, how long would it be before the producer would be in bankruptcy?

"Suppose an employer of labor unfairly treated his employees unfairly and poorly. In time, as a result of the action of those interested, aided by public sentiment, a remedy would be found, but after a great interruption of business and a loss of money.

Pleads for "Highest Thought."

"Again, let us assume that during a given year the demand for a product equals the knowledge of the capacity to produce, and yet each producer is greedy and anxious to sell more than his fair proportion and acts accordingly and this attitude is unrestrained until destructive results follow, as they will almost always certainly to be realized.

"It would be difficult," the chairman continued, "to bring about an ideal in business to a right disposition, requiring patience and the application of the highest thought might reach that position. The first essential to this was thorough acquaintance and frequent intercourse.

"There should be established and continuously maintained a business friendship which compels one to feel the same concern for his neighbor that he has for himself. It is no less in principle than the Golden Rule applied to business. Is it possible? If it is it will be certain to pay.

"True it is sometimes, and too often, that deceit is practiced and that advantage has been taken by those who have been given confidence by others, but this should characterize no one.

"For example, take any two men in this room engaged in competitive business but who are sufficiently acquainted to have the entire confidence of each other. Is there any question but that the conduct of their affairs neither would be opposed to do anything unreasonable or unreasonable towards the other? Or that the arrangements would be made for better results than could be realized if they were unfriendly or engaged in bitter and destructive competition?

"If they are in frequent discussion on questions in which they are interested, freely interchanging opinions and friendly confidential conditions concerning their business, will not individual conclusions reached by each naturally be of a higher order and more satisfactory in every particular?

Same Rule for Large Number.

"The argument, if sound, applies with greater force whenever a large number of persons are in the habit of meeting one another with the same spirit of friendship which exists with reference to a small number.

Judge Gary then sketched conditions in the United States. America had been created, with various of the European friends.

It had been the expressed wish of many of the representatives present to form an international association for the free exchange of opinions and information between them and with the world concerning all questions relating to the industry, so that information obtained from and brought in the scope of its activities from all parts of the world may be of benefit to all.

He believed it feasible. Necessarily it should be formed and managed. Judge Gary concluded, so as to avoid any suspicion or interference with any institution, and so as to obtain the approval of public sentiment.

Baron von Bodenhausen of the Krupp works, speaking for the German group, warmly supported the idea, and also it was the opinion of Sir Lindsay Wood, Sir Isaac and groups fully accepted the project. M. Keetman for the Austrian group. Then for England Sir Hugh Bell and Sir John Rundle for Lord Brassey and M. Gruyner for Belgium.

All present had known by correspondence the purposes of the meeting and had decided in advance to join the Golden Rule movement.

Among the speakers who approved Judge Gary's views were Count Zedlitz, of Spain, M. Wittmar, of Russia, M. Armitsholdt, of Hungary; T. J. Drummond, of Canada, J. A. Farrell, Charles M. Schwab, Philip L. King and E. A. S. Clarke of the United States.

The Greatest Curse in the World Worse Than Drunkenness, Worse Even Than the Gambling Passion

It is the Accursed Drug Habit, the Vice That Becomes a Disease, Destroying Mind, Will and Moral Character

Copyright 1911 by American Journal Examiner

This newspaper has made various fights in its career for the protection of human beings against exploitation.

We have had a good many things to say about the drinking of whiskey, and we believe that we have diminished that vile and harmful habit.

We had something to do with the elimination of public gambling, and propose to be active in that direction in future, whenever the gambling snake shows its head.

But in fighting against the sale of cocaine and morphine, and in succeeding to some extent in holding responsible the vile brutes that live upon the weaknesses of drug victims, we believe that we have done more than in any other direction to relieve unfortunate human beings from the worst curse that can possibly fall upon them.

There is no suffering in the world more horrible than that of the confirmed taker of drugs. The nervous forces are destroyed, the will power is wiped out, all capacity for truth-telling vanishes. And, except in the very rarest of cases, the man or woman who has become a confirmed victim of the drug habit loses all character, responsibility, and becomes merely a destroyed, miserable personality, craving the relief that the drug gives, using cunning, the only faculty that remains, for the gratification of the craving.

Unfortunately, the making of drug victims goes on steadily—AND THE DOCTORS, ORIGINALLY RESPONSIBLE FOR NINE OUT OF TEN OF THE VICTIMS, ARE STILL RESPONSIBLE FOR MANY.

This newspaper has fought against the retailing of cocaine, morphine and other drug poisons by the keepers of drug stores. But unfortunately it is not possible as yet to prevent the supplying of drugs by physicians in private practice, nor to do away with the creation of new drug victims—the work of doctors, ignorant or without conscience.

Now that the effects of these drugs are understood, the doctor who prescribes them and permits the patient to know what he is taking is a criminal and should be put in jail.

It would be an excellent thing if the husband who finds his wife a drug victim, the father who finds the daughter or son a drug victim, would trace the taking of the drug back to its beginning.

It would be an excellent thing, in every case where the drug was administered repeatedly by a physician, if a suit were brought in the public court to find whether or not physicians can be held responsible for this destruction of character and of happiness.

We are very glad to see that this important question is taken up earnestly and systematically in the July number of the magazine "Good Housekeeping."

Dr. Richard C. Cabot of Boston writes a letter of advice on the subject of drugs and drug-taking to victims and to the physicians as well. Dr. Cabot, and of course the great majority of the other reputable physicians of the country, understand fully their responsibility in this grave matter; they need no advice. But nearly all of the doctors, however high in character, knowledge and conscientious action, are too inclined to protect the mistakes, the weaknesses or the thinly disguised stupidity of their fellow physicians. It would be a good thing if the big doctors could tell some plain truths about the stupid, ignorant and vicious doctors. And it would also be a good thing if the same thing could be done for the worst class of lawyers by the best lawyers.

What the country needs is less "professional ethics" and more sense of responsibility toward human beings.

The article referred to in "Good Housekeeping" gives shocking statistics as to the increase of the drug-taking habit. But fortunately it holds out hope as a result of experiments made in hospitals, where drug victims are cured and put upon their feet.

It is necessary to remember always that the victim of drugs, even more than the victim of alcohol, is DISEASED, UNFORTUNATE AND NOT RESPONSIBLE FOR HIS CONDITION.

Kindness, sympathy and conditions which would make it possible to escape from the curse, possible to do with the aid of others what the weak will can no longer do, constitute the only remedy.

The AMERICAN suggests that the first thing for the doctors to do is to read what Osler has to say about the criminality OF GIVING DRUGS TO PATIENTS AT ALL, except to produce unconsciousness for surgical operations or for other imperative reasons.

It is very easy for a doctor to make himself appear valuable and helpful by giving a drug to the woman with a headache, by using opium in various forms, thus displaying an apparently marvellous power for instantly quieting pain.

But the doctor who does this, nine times out of ten, is preparing a field for the drug habit. He is only putting off the suffering, and probably making it infinitely worse in the end.

Naturally the competent physician must use his judgment; he must give to the suffering patient the benefit of all of his knowledge. Occasionally the drug, opium, etc., may be used wisely. But IN NO CASE SHOULD THE PATIENT BE PERMITTED TO KNOW WHAT IS ADMINISTERED. Every physician knows that the strongest man or woman, no matter of how good character or how strong a will, cannot be trusted to fight against the insidious effects of drugs taken repeatedly.

We hope that a good many of the doctors—every one of whom has a responsibility in the matter—will read Dr. Cabot's article in the July number of the "Good Housekeeping" magazine.

LETTERS FROM AMERICAN READERS

PATRIOTISM AND HUNGER

Editor AMERICAN.

Patriotism will not thrive on an empty stomach. The celebration of the national holiday means little to the man who is hungry and out of work. He would rather have a square meal than listen to a band concert or witness an exhibition of fireworks.

In crossing the Common to-day I overheard a man remark to his companion, "Well, with the Fourth of July over, what good does it do me?"

Both men were past middle life and later I learned in conversation with them that one was fifty-eight and the other sixty-two. They had been laborers all their lives but now found it difficult to get a job, as younger men had the first chance, and there seemed always to be plenty of younger men on hand.

Interested in their views of the Fourth I took occasion to talk with eight other men sitting on benches or under trees in different parts of the Common. Some were young, some middle-aged and some old. Two were from Spencer, Mass., where they were employed, the others were out of employment, and one of them, a young fellow about twenty-five, said he had slept on the Common since Thursday and hadn't eaten anything since Monday morning. None of the men were tramps, and all were fairly intelligent. Eight out of ten men I talked with were out of employment and some of them were hungry.

Would it not be well in the present day "safe and sane" celebration of Independence Day to provide a free dinner for those unfortunates—a sort of picnic in the open air?

A man is not less hungry on the Fourth of July than he is at Thanksgiving or Christmas, days when our charitable organizations provide bountifully for those with such a view to allaying the stomachs of the poor and [illegible]

MISS CANADA AND HER FLIRTING WITH UNCLE SAM

Written for the Boston American

By Dr. C. H. Parkhurst

Copyright, 1911, by the National News Association

THROUGHOUT the Dominion of Canada reciprocity is now the burning question. Lines have been sharply drawn and the battle is on.

There is no intermediate, neutral class, but most Canadians are either strongly for or strongly against.

There are those who feel that Mr. Laurier the Premier, is hazarding his position and influence by the exceedingly pronounced stand that he has taken in co-operation with Mr. Taft.

The relation which has subsisted between the United States and Canada for sixty years has been one of more or less open flirtation—most of the flirtation, until recently, having been on the side of Canada.

She was a maiden lady, without claim to her name, but an exceedingly indelible prospect. We, most of us, remember the time when to be called a Canadian was almost a term of reproach.

Although not high-born, young Canada was a girl of large ambition, and commenced, more than a half-century ago, to make eyes at the United States. The latter had already attained to a state of immense self-consciousness, and regarded Canada's pretty courting ways with only an amused interest; in other words, did not reciprocate.

Treaties proposed by the Canadian Government were either declined or were not renewed when the term for which the compact had been made had expired.

But Miss Canada Had No Dowry to Bring in Those Days

The way in which Canada persistently clung to us was indeed hardly unkindly. She would not take "no" when it was handed to her. The powers at Washington would have regarded with more tender consideration her persistent overtures had she been able to bring a dowry.

But all she had to offer was herself, and we were not ready to marry merely for love, even had our heart been soft toward her, which it was not.

The girl, bruised by repeated rebuffs, finally demitted her caresses about the beginning of the present century.

Persuaded that she was getting rather past the marriageable age, and that it was to herself that she would have to look for support, she set her talents to work and, by sagacity and industry, commenced laying the foundation of a fortune which was wonderously accumulated. Her annual commercial dealings with outside people have crept up during the last forty years from $130,000,000 to $730,000,000.

So that now, although she has become somewhat of an old maid, she is beginning to be attractive, she has grown out of the blooming period of girlhood into the matronatic condition of the matronly stage of life.

Dimples have given place to furrows; but there is something that pays better than romance and she has it, a lot of it.

And, therefore, at this advanced period of her womanhood, the United States, with an eye to the main chance, commences making love to her.

Is it strange, now that she has learned to take luxurious care of herself, that she should be disposed to look with chilly regard upon the belated overtures of calculating affection with which the United States is now pursuing her?

This is not all there is to the question, and is simply one feature of the conservative view.

The Tramp Problem Comes Up Again

THE tramp problem has come up again with the approach of Summer.

The man who can work and will not should be made to. Actual invalids we will help feed and clothe, but for a man in health work is the normal condition.

Work that is good and solid helps to keep a healthy man well and tends to prevent his going to the bad. To pauperize him means, therefore, to promote his demoralisation, physically and ethically.

We are not talking about those who want to work but cannot find work, but about those who can find work but had rather steal or beg.

A farm colony exists in Switzerland, by means of which tramps have not only ceased to be a financial burden upon the State, but a source of income.

If that can be done in Switzerland, where land is expensive and labor cheap, it certainly ought to be possible to do almost as well here, where land is cheap and labor high.

He Writes About Pa Being a King

By WILLIAM F. KIRK

FOR heving sake, sed Ma to Pa when he calm hoam last nite, ware in the world did you git that hat? It was a awful funny hat that Pa had on. It was straw, but the straw wasent sticking together & it looked like a straw stack. What do you meen by cumming up in this swell hotel with a thatch like that on your hed? What do you supposa Mister Rankin & Mister Cummings will say?

I have been crowned, sed Pa. I was jest to a coronashun. I am the King of America, sed Pa.

Who toald you so? sed Ma. All of the gang, Pa sed. They crowned me down to McGraw's. Do you see the way this hat looks, sed Pa? Well, it was a new hat at first, but it dident look a bit like a crown. So Mister Harris Lyon took a 20 ounce bilyard cue & bit me over the conk, sed Pa, & after I had fell down he sed Rise, sir Knight, & be a Kink. That was the story of my private coronashun, Pa sed.

How very interesting, sed Ma. Who is this Keeper of the Cue, Mister Lyon?

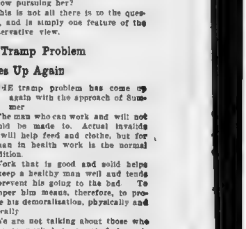
He rites short stories, Pa sed. Does he rite them funny with a bilyard cue? sed Ma. No, he is the rex class, sed Pa. He dident happen to be working this afternoon, that is all. I am the King of America, sed Pa, how my hart swells within me to think that I am the ruler at large of all them rolling corn feelds & iron mines & grate cities which helps to mak up our grate common-welth.

I guess you dident happen to be working very much this afternoon yourself, sed Ma. Now cum in & git yure dinner. It is gitting cosid. How often, oh, how often has yure dinner got cosid, Ma sed, like the hart of the loving girl that gaiv you her hand back in that littel Wisconsin village.

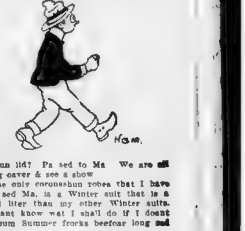
That is so, sed Pa, you did give me yure hand, dident you? Yure father mitted me kind of cordle... too, sed Pa, we be knew I was going to talk you away from yure home ties. It is grate to be the king of America, Pa sed. I wud sooner wear a straw crown & be the king of the United States, sed Pa, than to ware a crown of diamonds & be the Mayor of Uruguay & Paraguy.

Wen Pa was saying all this Ma thought that he had been around with the boys too long but wen he winked at me I knew that he was only kidding Ma, so I dident say anything. Ma is always reddy to think that Pa has been out too long.

Now that I am the King, sed Pa, wunn are pure coronashun robes & pure coronashun hat? Pa sed to Ma. We are all going over & see a show.



The onlv coronashun robes that I have got, sed Ma, is a Winter suit that is a littel liter than my other Winter suits. I dosnt know wat I shall do if I dosnt git sum Summer frocks beefore long sed Ma. Think of all the bargains, too. If I only had a hundred dollars.



Then Pa stopped kidding & he stratened up & sed: Her, deerest, is a hundred dollars, see you. I only wear this busted straw hat boem to tense you. The boys brook it on my hed wen they heard that I had made $1000 in a lucky speck-ulashun. Oh, you deer boy sed Ma. Oh, my King.

damp situations. There is no other reptile in New England which is at all dangerous.

There are only two species of shrubbery which are poisonous to the touch in New England, the rhus toxicodendron, familiarly known as the common poison ivy, and the rhus venenata, known as the poison dogwood, the poison elder or the poison sumac, the latter being the more dangerous of the two. The poison ivy is a three-leaved plant and grows only in a creeping form. The poison dogwood always grows in shrub form. It has seven leaves, ordinarily of long, slender lines, and generally bears a cluster of yellowish-white berries. It may easily be distinguished from the more common sumac by the clusters of red fruit borne by the latter.
